People, those people
who need people.

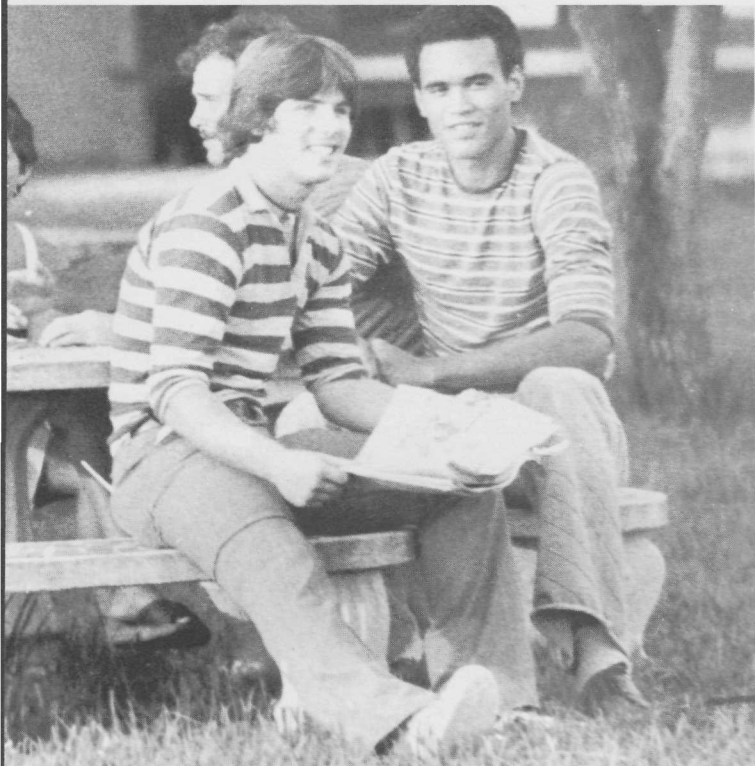

They're the luckiest
people in our world.

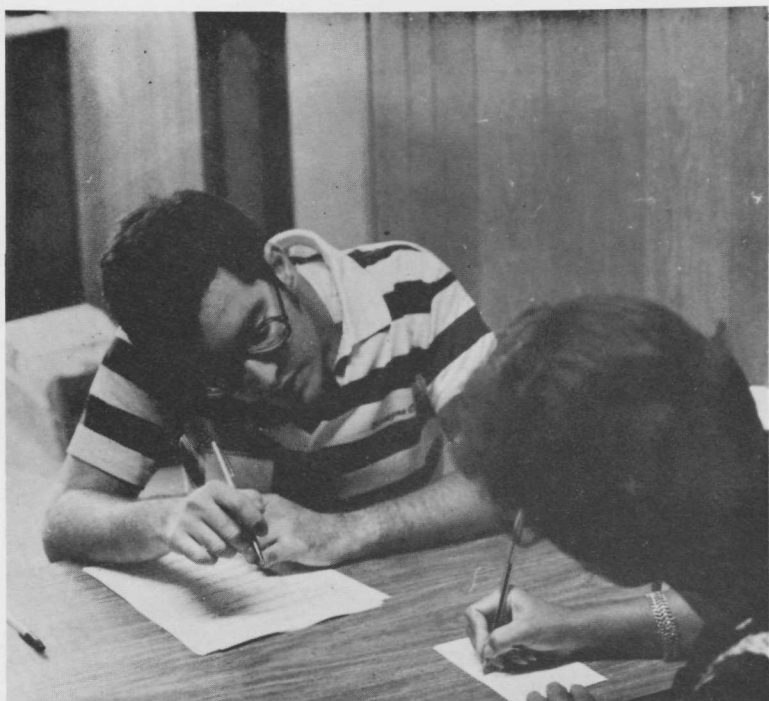

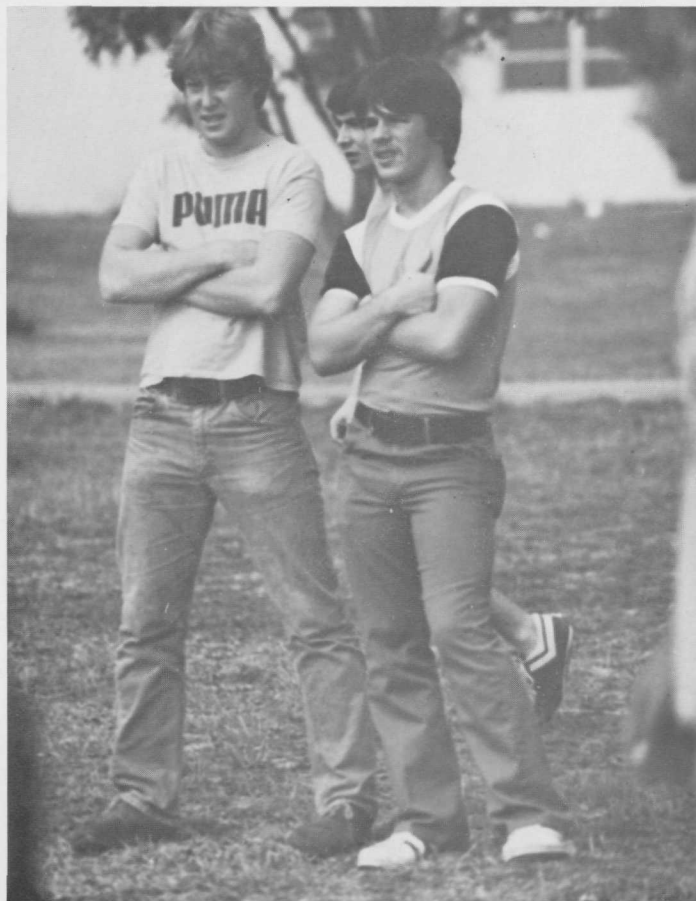

Lovers are very special people, they're the luckiest people.

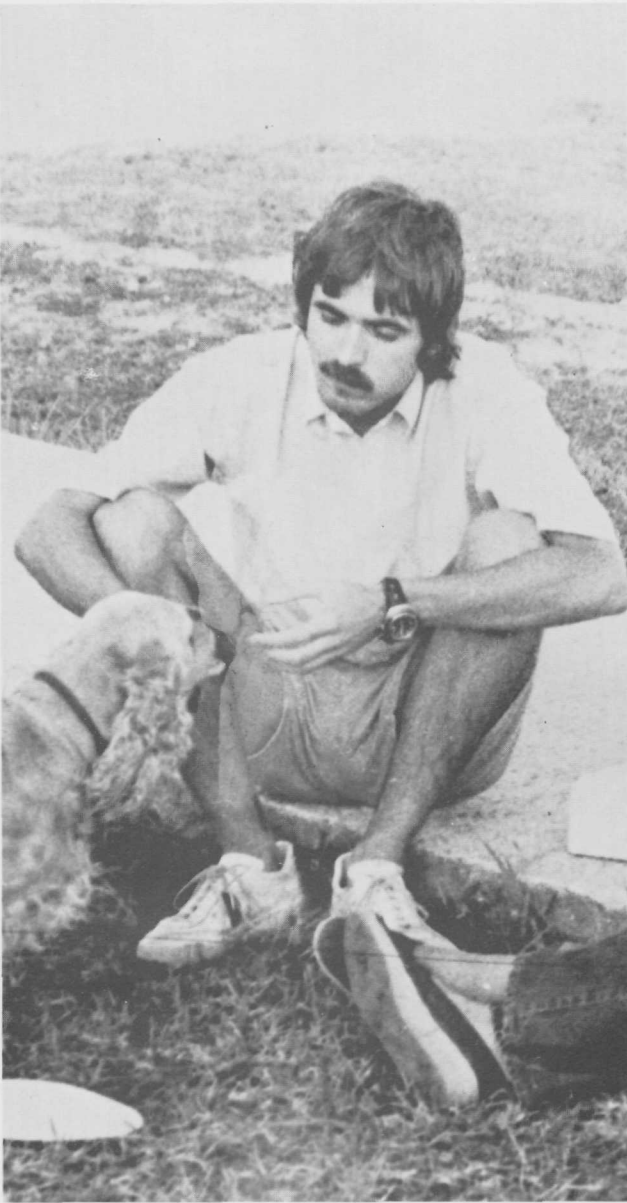

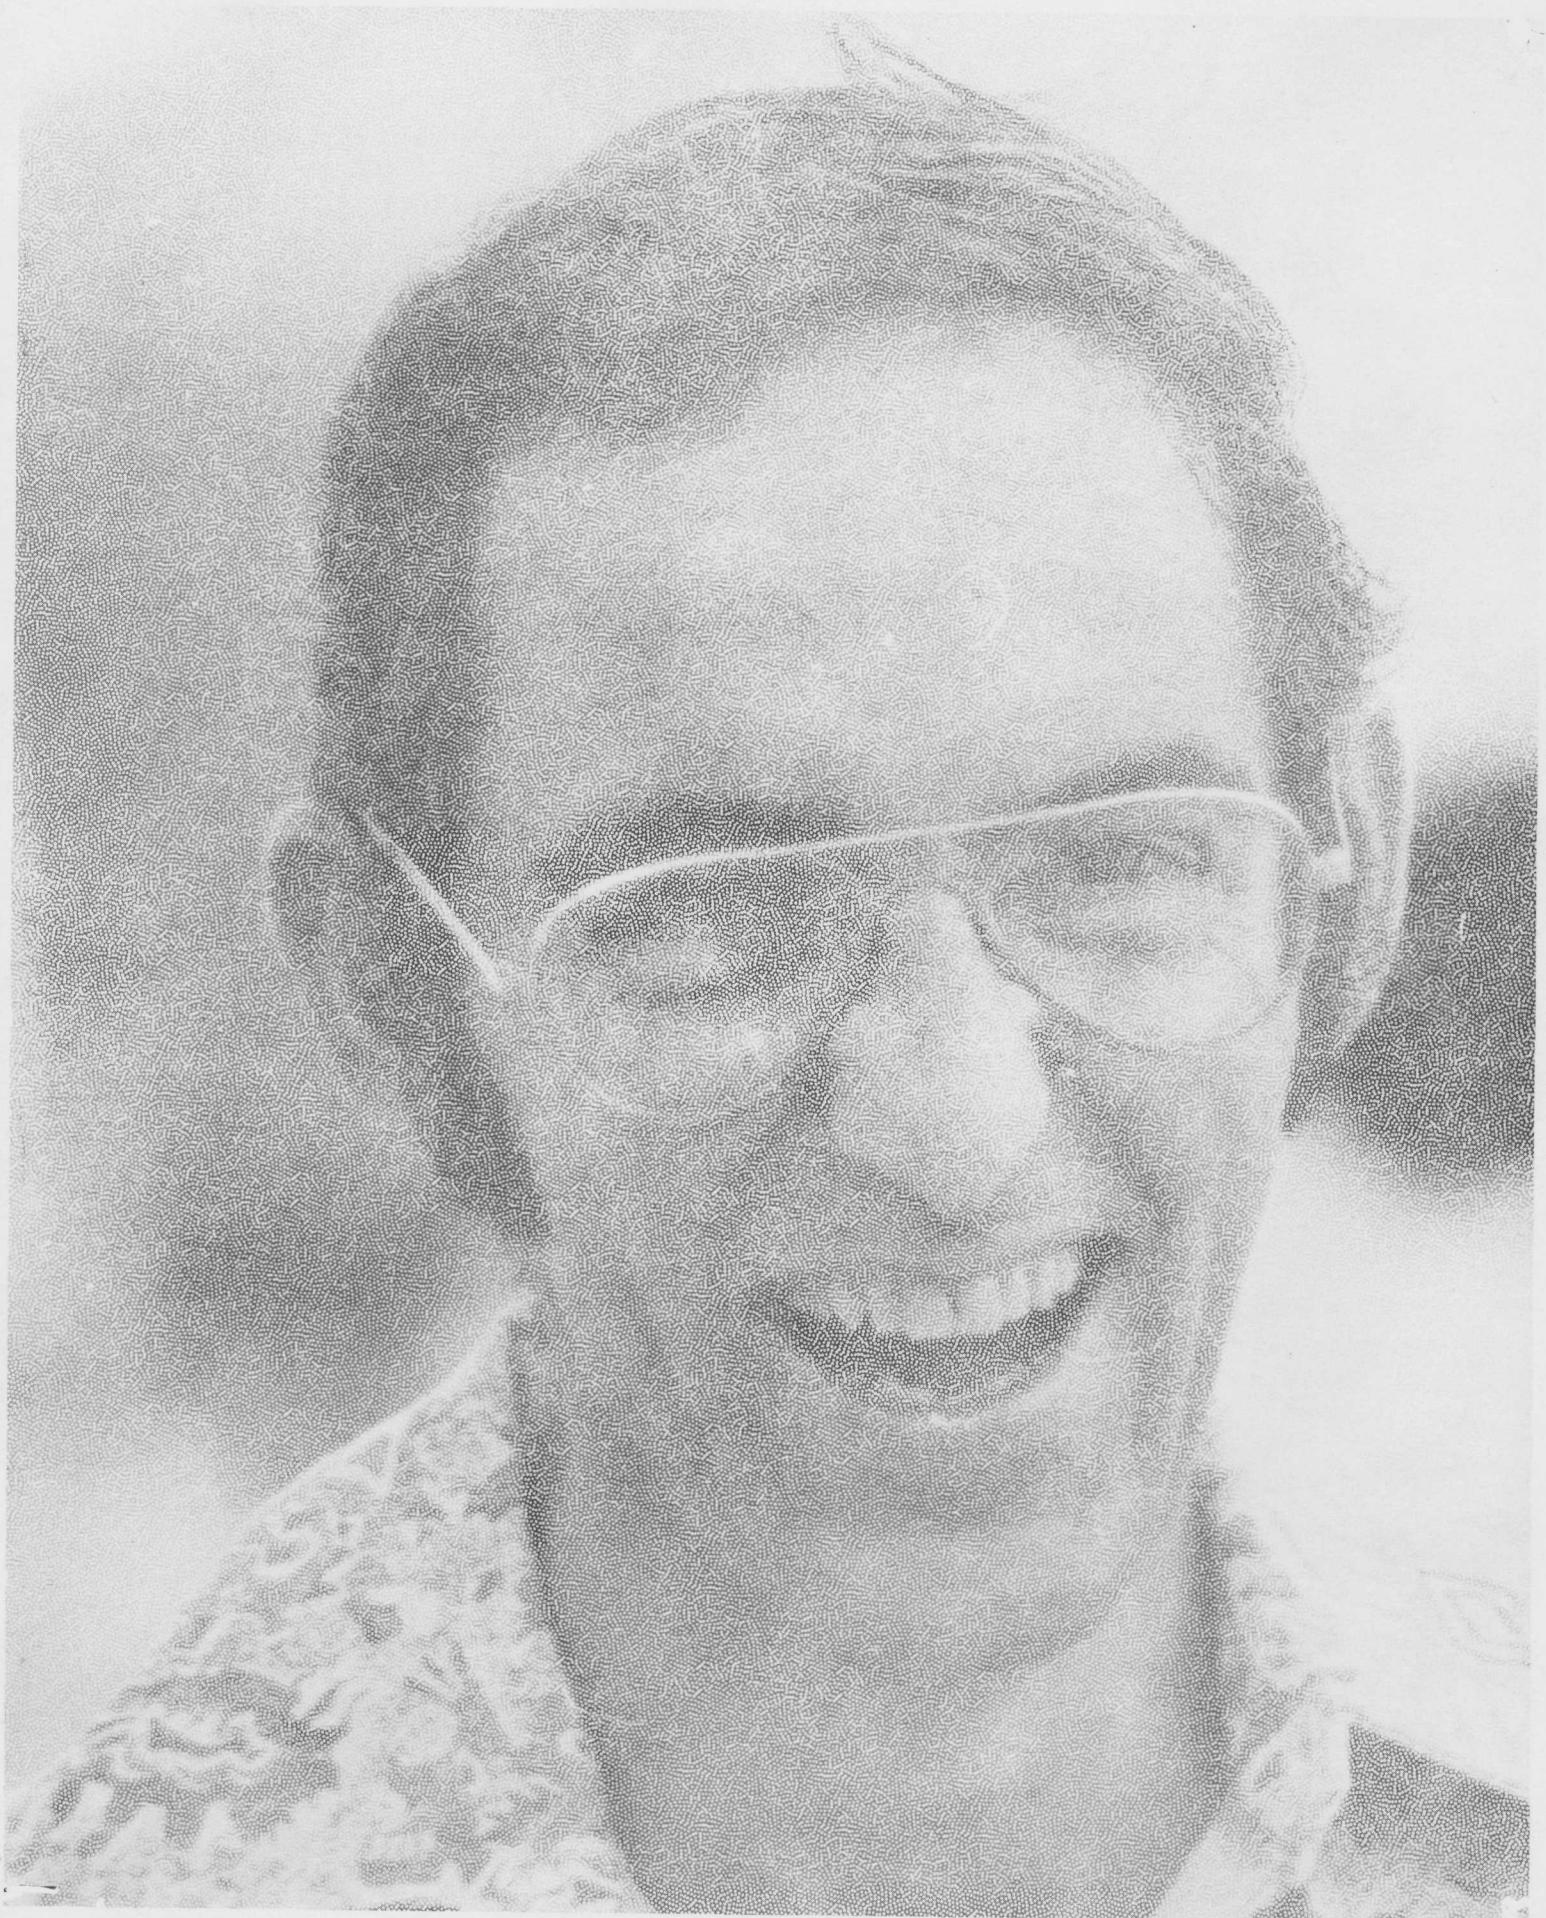

One person, a very special person; a feeling deep in your soul says you were half, now you are whole.

No more hunger and thirst, first be a
person who needs people.
For those of us who need people are the luckiest people in the world.

LOGOS TRIBUTE

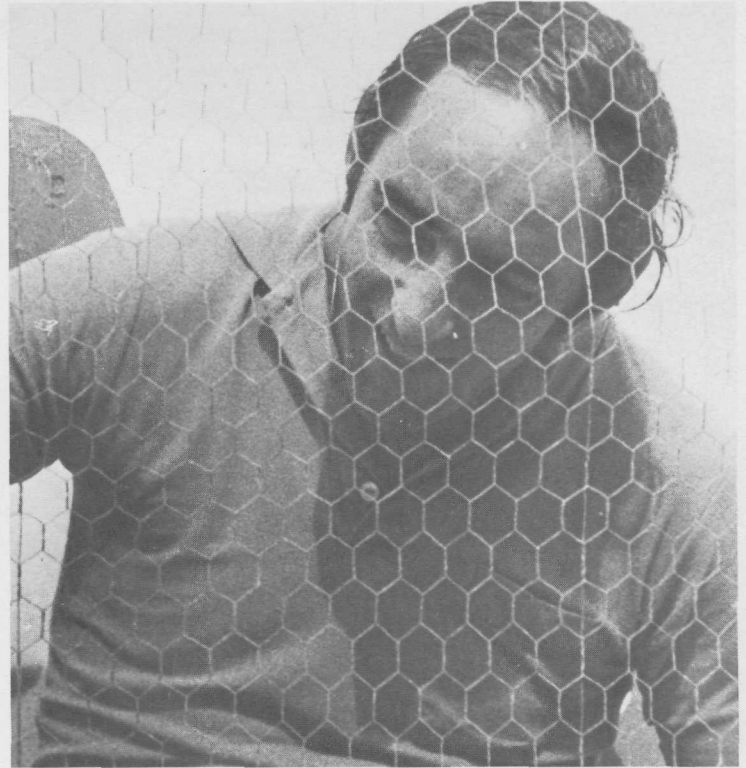

REV. JAMES MacDOUGALL

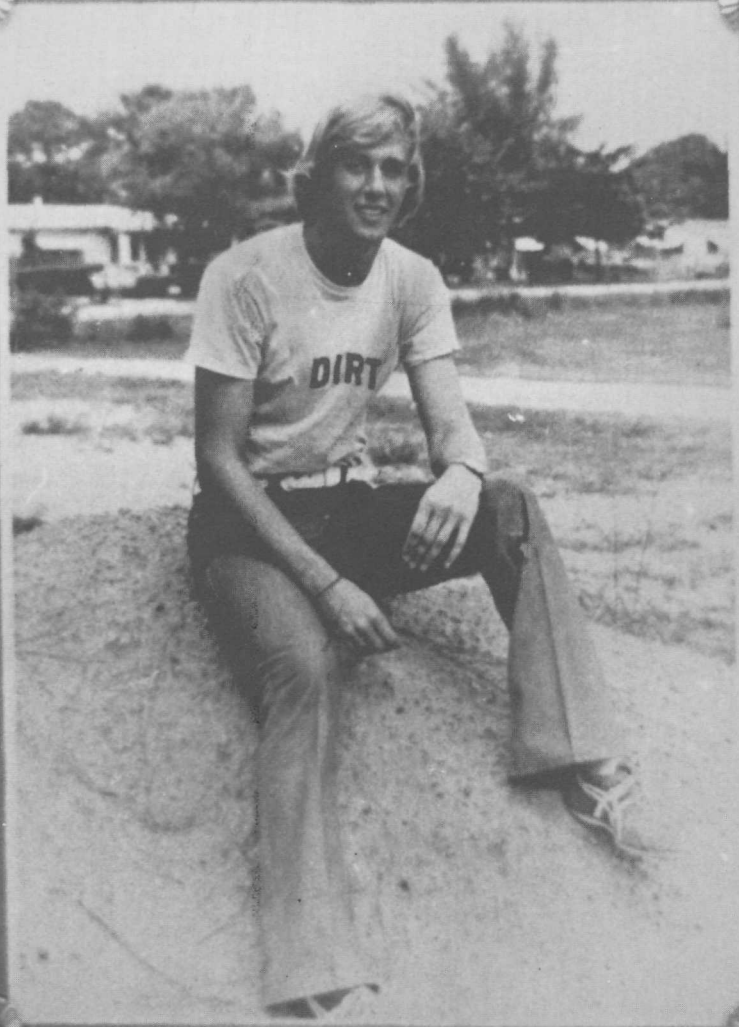

"If a picture paints a thousand words then why can't I paint you?
The words will never show the you I've come to know . . ." BREAD

There really are no words to describe or express the way we feel about a man who has done so much for everyone here at Biscayne. And if the pictures on these two pages could paint a thousand words each, it still would not be adequate. That is why we are making this tribute to the man (affectionately known as Mac) So that he and anyone else reading this will know just how special this tender and compassionate man is to us.

Thank you Mac for all you have been and everything you have done.

KEVIN

It's very difficult to write just a little about Kevin because most of us knew him well. Just looking through the photographs is the best way to think of Kevin because a glimpse is all that is necessary in order for us to recall all the special moments that he brought to each person that he met. Remember those moments and be happy because Kevin would have wanted it that way.

May, 1978

Dear Graduate:

The overriding influence on student attitudes today is the economy. Conventional wisdom holds that the benefits of a private general education are far too small to warrant the expense in today's inflated economy.

You will give the lie to that low estimate of the economical benefits of a liberal education. You, as generalists, rather than specialists who find all too often after graduation that there are relatively few jobs with their precise qualifications, will find that the number of jobs in the American economy for which a college education is required is rising. You will also discover that the basic capabilities that open doors in this economy - effective communications skills, common sense, and sound judgment - are fundamental goals of a liberal education. Today, fewer and fewer college graduates enter the field of their specialization. But the needs of business remain the same: people who can make decisions, communicate well and work with people. You have been trained for those needs. You have learned to handle the language fluently, to esteem people as individuals and use your rational powers to arrive at correct conclusions.

Face the future without misgivings. Pessimism is not for the young. Accept life's challenges for what they are - motivating forces to measure a man.

God bless you.

Sincerely,

Rev. John J. Farrell O.S.A.

EDITORS' LETTER

Our special thanks to the Logos Staff - without all of you it would have been impossible.

We feel the following people deserve special recognition: Marilyn Castro, Susan Carson, Tom Freiwald, Dan Bowler, Jan DiIorio, Fr. Gary McCloskey, and Dr. Jim Conley.

To the graduating class we want to congratulate you and wish you the best of luck.

We believe this thought from Thoreau may serve as a guide for all of us.

If a man does not keep pace
perhaps it is because he hears
a different drummer.
Let him step to the music
he hears,
however measured or far away.
