St. Thomas University
The Archdiocesan Catholic University of Florida

Office of the President

Dear Graduate:

Congratulations to the distinguished members of the Class of 1995. Undoubtedly, you have great personal satisfaction in the accomplishments of your years here at St. Thomas University. The entire community is proud of you.

A student reaches the goal of graduation through hard work, diligent study, and tremendous commitment. You have made many sacrifices and your family and friends have supported you. In return for your commitment, St. Thomas has given you an excellent education that prepares you to become a productive member of the community in which you will live and work. You will be seen as a success and you are well prepared to take your place there.

The personal caring environment of St. Thomas has given an added dimension to the excellent education you received in the classroom. Many people care about you here. You have benefited by the diversity of the University. In many ways we at St. Thomas University are what the world is only now becoming, a group of people from diverse cultures and backgrounds living and working together for common goals in harmony and peace.

Your time here has exposed you to values, ethics and moral teaching that come out of the great tradition of a Catholic university. These qualities set St. Thomas University apart from other colleges and universities and you from the graduates of these other institutions.

Your education at St. Thomas will help you meet the challenges you face in a world that becomes more complex every day. Much success to you. You always have a home on our campuses and you remain a dear member of our family.

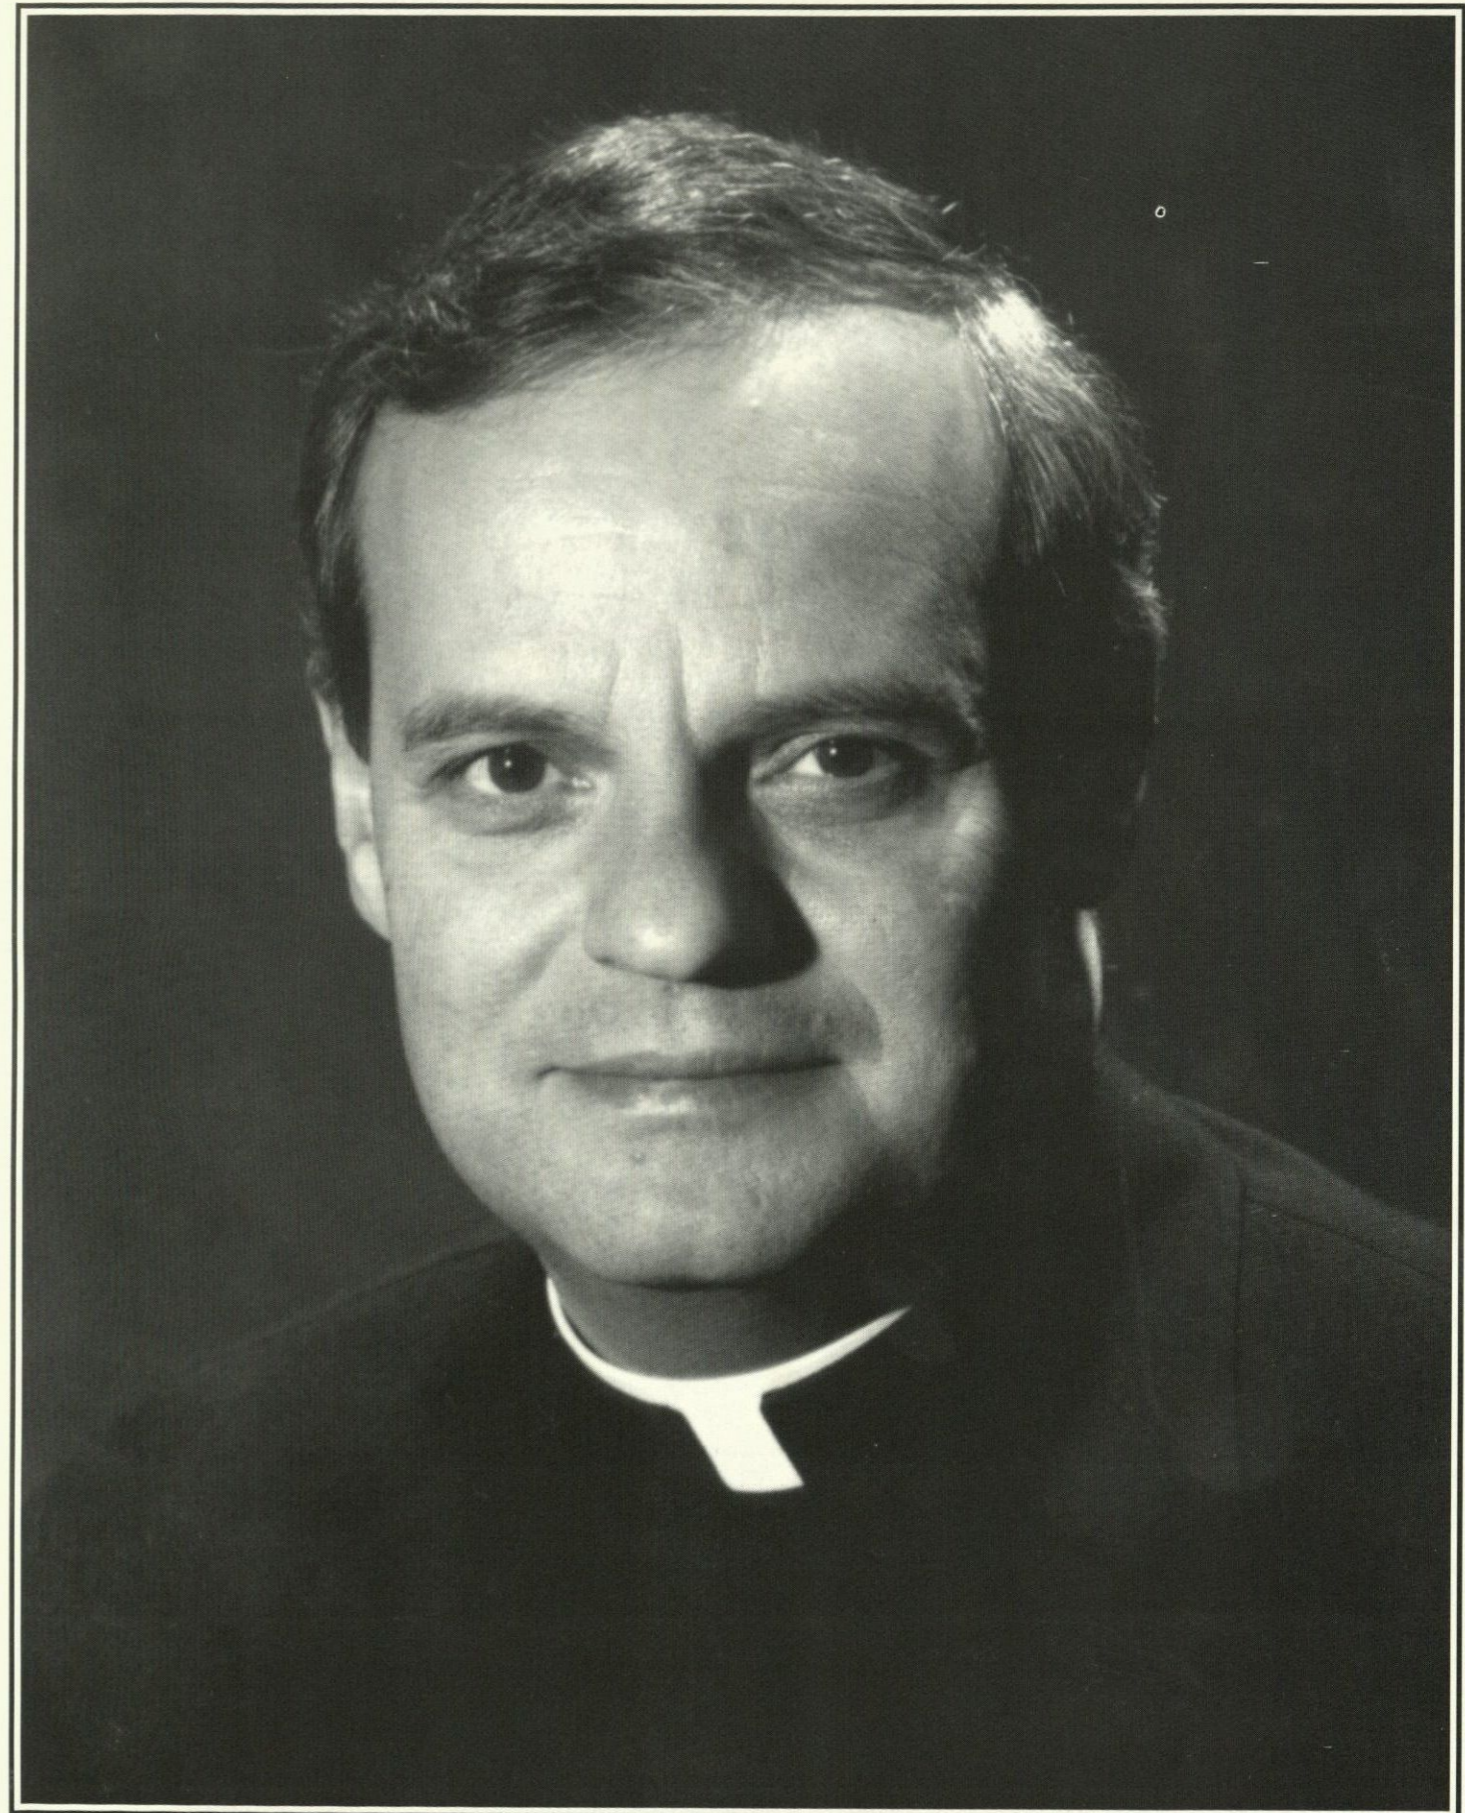

God Bless You.

Sincerely yours,

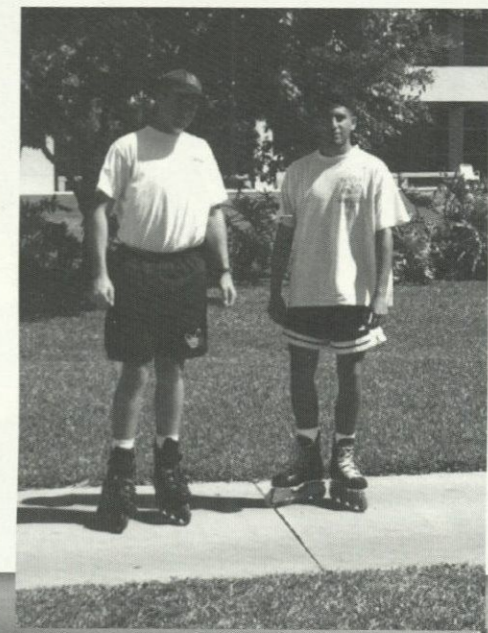

Franklyn M. Casale

St. Thomas University School of Law Granted Full Accreditation by ABA

The American Bar Association granted full accreditation to St. Thomas University's School of Law on February 14, 1995. The final decision by the ABA's House of Delegates follows a recommendation given by the Accreditation Committee which found that St. Thomas University's School of Law is in full compliance with the ABA Standards for Approval of Law Schools.

Monsignor Franklyn M. Casale, President of St. Thomas University, said that "the full accreditation of St. Thomas University School of Law by the American Bar Association recognizes the long-standing effort of the University to establish itself as an institution of the highest quality in legal education."

The law school, founded in 1984, has been provisionally approved by the ABA since 1988. Present enrollment stands at 481 students of whom 32% are minority. The law school is operated under the aegis of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Miami and is the only Catholic law school in the Southeastern United States.

The law center is located on the main campus of St. Thomas University and is one of the newest and most modern facilities of its kind. The center, containing 62,000 square feet, includes a multi-level library, a moot court amphitheater, a student activity center, faculty and administrative offices and classrooms.

Daniel J. Morrissey, Dean of the School of Law, stated that the full accreditation "means that our law school has really come of age . . . and all of us can be quite proud of our accomplishment." Morrissey went on to say that full accreditation is only the beginning and that "our goal is to make St. Thomas School of Law one of the premier law schools in our region."

Monsignor Casale added that "accreditation reflects the hard work and commitment of talented faculty, administration, and legal advisors. As the only Catholic law school in the Southeast, St. Thomas University School of Law will continue to pursue excellence and value education in the law."

Seniors

March 22, 1995

To the Class of 1995:

The time has finally arrived! You have completed your classes, your projects, and your exams. You have attained your goal—your degree. Congratulations!

As you bask in the warm glow of knowing what you have accomplished, I ask that you also look back to your years at St. Thomas. I ask that you “take stock” of all that has occurred during your enrollment. Your own personal growth and development, the changes that have occurred at the university, and let us not forget the changes in our community and world.

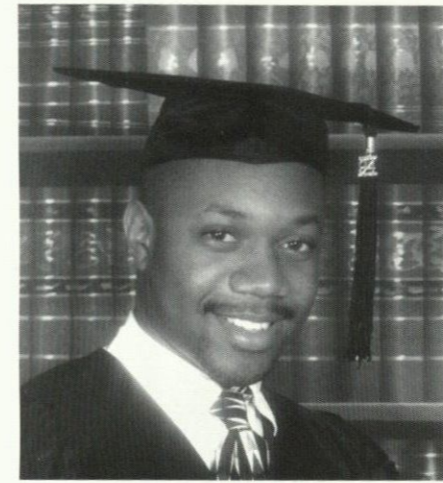

Hopefully many of the changes you have experienced were the results of the primary objectives of this university: to provide a solid moral and ethical foundation, to enhance your ability to think critically and independently, and to make certain that you take to heart the need to serve others in the community, particularly those less fortunate. Hopefully all those elements will be evident, when you take stock of your years at St. Thomas.

I also hope that while a student of St. Thomas, you felt that you were an integral part of the entire campus community. That you shared many common feelings and aspirations with your fellow classmates. That St. Thomas was a home to you during your years of growth. It is my hope that I and other members of the campus community served you well and provided you with something positive for your life. It is certainly the goal of everyone at St. Thomas to provide you, the student, with the necessary tools and skills with which to face life.

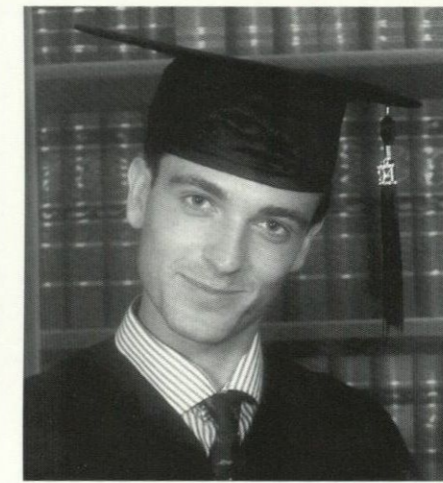

I wish each and every one of you success in all of your future endeavors and may the love of this campus family always remain with you. Once again to the Class of 1995 congratulations! I wish you all well.

Sincerely,

I would have never thought that I would be asked to be the editor of this yearbook. . . . This proved to be an enormous challenge that I, along with my staff, worked very hard at fulfilling. There were times when it seemed impossible that we would finish this book — but we did! (Rafael, that poem really helped . . . thanks.) Juan Diaz and Christine Heft, thank you for giving me the opportunity to put together the 1995 Logos Yearbook.

This edition would not have been possible without the enormous amount of help I received from Denise Orsatelliz, Lawrence Newberg, Janeth Brown, Clara Jenkins, Collin Byrnes, and Alex “Animal” Puga. At times when I did not think that we would meet our deadlines, you were there to give me the strength to go the extra mile. I will always be grateful to you! Especially the last deadline — thanks Lawrence, Janeth, and Denise — I will always remember you, the support you have given me, and everyone at St. Thomas. Thank you for making this such a memorable year!

Good luck and see you next year!

Sincerely,
