

Pope Sets Date Of Ecumenical Council Oct. 11

VATICAN CITY (NC) — Pope John XXIII set next Oct. 11 as the opening date for the long-heralded ecumenical council.

In so doing he chose to tie it to the memory of the Council of Ephesus in 431, whose decisions upheld belief in the Virgin Mary as Mother of God, which remains today a keystone in the belief of both Catholics and Orthodox Christians. Oct. 11 is the feast of the Divine Maternity of Mary.

The Pope said his main hopes for the results of the council, to be known as the Second Vatican Ecumenical Council, are "that the Church, Spouse of Christ, may strengthen still more her divine energies and extend her beneficial influence in still greater measure to the minds of men." He added:

"In this way there is further reason to hope that all people — especially those whom we so sorrowfully see suffering because of misfortune, discords and mournful conflicts — turning their eyes more trustfully toward Christ . . . may finally achieve true peace in respect for mutual rights and duties."

Pope John announced the date for the council on the feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin — three years and eight days after he first revealed his intention to summon all the Catholic bishops of the world for a 21st ecumenical council.

NOT A SUMMONS

He made the date known in a "motu proprio," a document drawn up and issued on his own initiative and personally signed by him. The document is not an actual summons to the council. That was issued in the bull of convocation which the Pope published on Christmas Day of 1961. In the bull Pope John specified that titular bishops, who do not have a strict right under Canon Law to attend councils, are invited to the Second Vatican Council. The Pope has not stated in either document what topics are to be discussed at the council.

The motu proprio recalls

AT CENTRO HISPANO CATOLICO

Chancery For Spanish Opens

An office of the Diocese of Miami Chancery to serve the needs of Spanish-speaking Catholics in South Florida was established this week in the downtown area.

Bishop Coleman F. Carroll announced the appointment of Msgr. John J. Fitzpatrick, diocesan director of the Spanish-speaking Apostolate, as assistant Chancellor to organize and conduct the new office which will be located for the present time in the Centro Hispano Catolico, diocesan Spanish center located at 130 NE Second St.

Assisting Monsignor Fitzpatrick

as secretaries are Father Angel Vizcarra, O. P. and Father Eugenio del Busto.

Ordained to the priesthood in 1942, Monsignor Fitzpatrick is pastor of the Little Flower parish, Hollywood, and executive editor of The Voice. He was elevated to the rank of a papal chamberlain with the title of Very Reverend Monsignor in 1955.

Father Vizcarra, a native of Vizcaya, Spain, was ordained in 1956 and is vicar provincial of the Dominican Fathers of Santo Domingo. He came to the Miami Diocese in 1959 and presently serves as assistant to Msgr. James F. Enright, Miami Vicar for Religious.

A native of Havana, Cuba, Father Del Busto was ordained a priest in 1960 and came to Miami from the Diocese of Matanzas.

Sixty-five Spanish-speaking priests are presently serving in the Spanish-speaking Apostolate to minister to the spiritual needs of the more than 100,000 Latin American Catholics now in South Florida in addition to the thousands of Cuban refugees who have fled to Miami.

Pope Distributes Candlemas Candles To Historic Areas

VATICAN CITY (NC) — The Pope has ordered that specially decorated candles presented to him on Candlemas be given to churches at sites of the past 20 ecumenical councils, to churches in cities intimately connected with his life and to war cemeteries in Italy.

Pope John XXIII will also send candles to cities connected with the lives of persons beatified or canonized during his reign.

Superiors general of religious orders, rectors of national colleges in Rome, and other Church dignitaries took part in the colorful ceremony of presentation of candles on the feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, also known as Candlemas.

A procession of donors brought the candles one by one to the Pope, who chatted amiably with each as the procession moved slowly past his throne in the Vatican's Consistorial Hall.

The candles were about four feet high, decorated with the papal coat of arms and intricate and beautiful designs.

Soviet Theorist Underlines Red Antagonism To Religion

BERLIN (NC) — Soviet communism's foremost theorist has reminded the world that communism can never make ideological peace with religion.

At the same time, Mikhail Suslov admitted that some people within Soviet Russia are trying to spread religion.

In a speech reaching here in the Soviet Communist party organ, Pravda, Suslov lumped apostolic people together with panhandlers, thieves, palm-greasers, hoodlums and bureaucrats (a term of opprobrium in the Soviet Union).

"Can we consider that peaceful coexistence exists in the realm of ideas?" Suslov asked a group of directors and professors of social science institutions in the Soviet Union.

"Of course not. Among some people in the U.S.S.R. the relics of capitalism still hang on. They sponge, steal, bribe, indulge in hooliganism and bureaucratism, and promote religious ideology.

"Is peaceful coexistence of our socialist ideology possible with such happenings? Impossible! Impossible without treason to the interests of communism."

Those chosen by the council to attend a council include cardinals, even those who are not bishops; patriarchs, primates, archbishops and residential bishops, even those not yet consecrated; abbots and independent prelates; heads of certain monastic congregations, and heads of other religious orders and titular bishops, if invited.

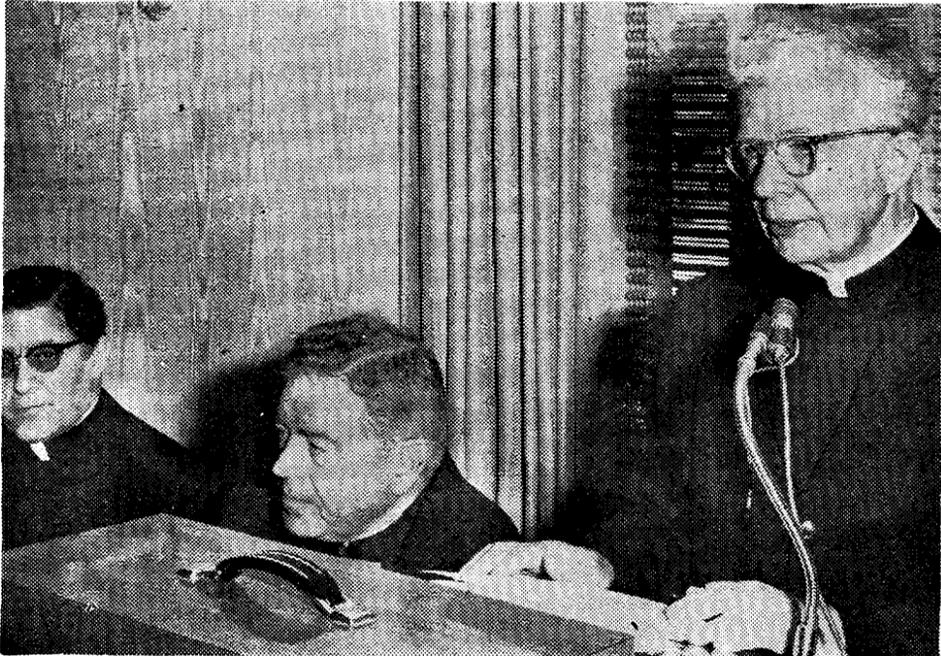

In addition, experts in theology and canon law may be invited to the council as consultants but have no vote in council decisions.

At the Second Vatican Council it is expected that leaders of non-Catholics Christian churches will also be present as observers.

IN DADE AND BROWARD COUNTIES

CCD Classes Begin Monday

Courses in Doctrine and Methods, sponsored by the Fraternity of Christian Doctrine will begin in Dade and Broward Counties next week, with registration conducted prior to classes.

The classes will be for those interested in teaching CCD courses, those who are already teaching and parishoners who would like to attend for their own benefit.

Dade County courses will be held at Holy Family parish Monday nights, Immaculate Conception parish Wednesday nights and St. Brendan parish on Thursday nights. The Broward County classes will be on Tuesday nights in St. Thomas Aquinas High School, Fort Lauderdale.

All classes will be from 7:30 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. They are staggered so a class missed in one location can be made up in another.

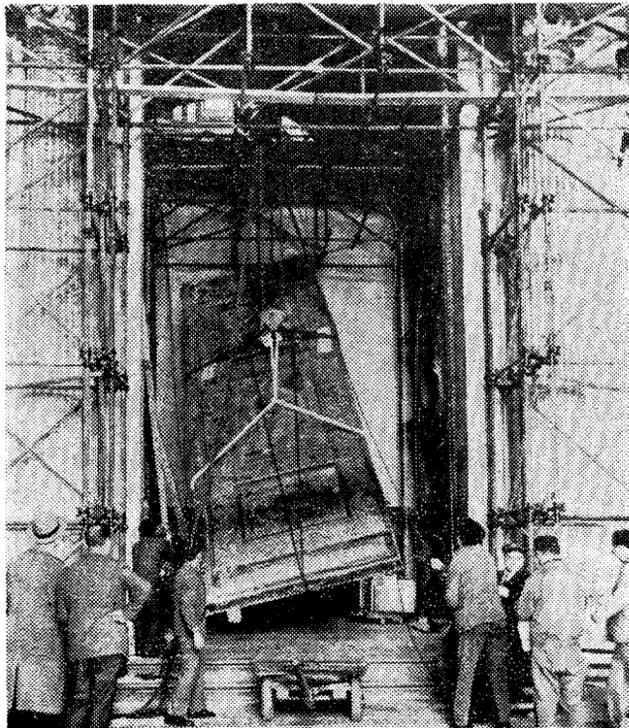

Doctrine classes will be taught by priests, and lay teachers instructed by the Mission Helpers of the Sacred Heart will teach Methods.

Registration can be made at the first class meetings. Those undecided about registering will be permitted to audit the classes.

Besides these classes, others are being taught by way of tapes in Clewiston and two locations on the Keys. They are already under way and other times and locations will be announced later.

The doctrine courses will be the last offered in the Dade and Broward County areas until next fall.

Pope Asks Prayers To End Strife In Congo, Algeria

VATICAN CITY (NC) — Pope John XXIII has expressed anxiety and sorrow over increasing violence in Algeria and the Congo, and called for prayers to end world strife.

The Pope spoke at Candlemas ceremonies at which specially decorated candles were presented to him. Among those present were heads of religious orders and rectors of national colleges in Rome.

"On this holiday, unfortunately, not everything is serene happiness," Pope John said. He added that "lamentations are reaching us from every part of the world — from Europe, from Asia, from Africa, from America — where social restlessness is subverting civil order."

The Pope contrasted the light shed by the candles he had received with the darkness besetting the world and made special reference to Algeria, where the increasingly bitter conflict between Moslem nationalists and European settlers has taken hundreds of lives in recent weeks.

"Permit us to name explicitly one country," he said, "which we visited in 1950 and which left on us an indelible and beautiful impression. That country is Algeria."

"Every day and every night," the Pope said, "the most serious kind of violence increases the number of victims there."

"The very sad events that occur one after the other in every part of the world, some of which have become more serious in recent weeks, even exploding into episodes of open disorder and crime, are reasons for serious anxiety and heartfelt sorrow," he added.

The Pontiff expressed sadness at "all episodes of abuse of all kinds, whether they be rash rebellions or arbitrary repressions, which continue to stain the world with blood."

"Experience proves that violence produces violence," he continued. "This is not the way to defend the rights of man, his freedom, civic order, true progress, civilization and peace."

The Pope urged everyone to pray harder for an end to world strife. He particularly invoked the Precious Blood.

Growing Influence Of Faith Alarms The Reds In Russia

BERLIN (NC) — A Moscow newspaper received here has expressed concern over the growing influence of religion in the area of Vladimir, one of Russia's ancient centers of the Orthodox faith.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, organ of the Soviet Union's Young Communist League, said that in 1960 more parents in the region had their children baptised than ever before, including league members and even officials.

Vladimir, 110 miles northeast of Moscow, is the site of a number of famous 12th and 13th-century churches and monasteries.

Komsomolskaya Pravda called on young communists to fight religion. It said:

"The majority of fathers and mothers (in the Vladimir area) who took their children to church are young people and some are even members of the Young Communist League."

It added that on a collective farm in the area, six league members were married in church.

School Bible-Reading Law Held Unconstitutional In Pa.

PHILADELPHIA (NC) — A special three-judge Federal court has ruled that the present practice of Bible reading in Pennsylvania public schools is unconstitutional "promotion of religiousness."

Their decision voided Pennsylvania's amended law requiring Bible reading in public schools.

The amendment was enacted by the state legislature after a Federal district court in September 1959 declared the original Bible-reading law unconstitutional because it "amounts to religious instruction."

The decision was appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court, but in the meantime, the state legislature enacted an amendment permitting children to be excused from attendance at Bible-reading sessions at the request of their parents.

The U. S. high court sent the case back to lower courts for review in light of the legislature's action.

But the special Federal court found the amendment made no difference. It said that reading of 10 Bible verses daily without comment, as required by the law, constituted religious instruction and "the promotion of religiousness."

It held further that the reading was a "religious ceremony."

Around the NATION

The challenge to the practice was begun by Edward L. Schempp, a resident of nearby Roslyn, Pa., against the Abington Township School Board.

When he initiated the suit in 1958, one of his sons was a senior at the township's senior high school. Two more of his children now attend the school. Schempp is a Unitarian.

The Pennsylvania Public School Act of 1949 required the Bible reading. In addition, many schools voluntarily adopted mass recitation of the Lord's Prayer, although Abington dropped this while the law suit was in progress.

Schempp attacked Bible reading as a violation of the First Amendment's provisions on separation of Church and State.

A brief also attacking the practice was submitted to the court by the Jewish Community Council of Greater Philadelphia which argued that the practice established one religion over another.

CATHOLIC PRESS month proclamation by Mayor Robert Wagner, of New York City, is given to Father Albert J. Nevins, president, CPA and James Doyle, CPA executive secretary, center.

Catholic Press 'Expanding, Robust,' Says CPA President

NEW YORK (NC) — Catholic Press Month this year finds the press "robust and expanding," according to the president of the Catholic Press Association.

Father Albert J. Nevins, M.M., said Catholic publications are "larger, more colorful, more creative than ever."

"Circulation is at an all time high," he added. "We do not intend to remain stable, but will continue our strong advance."

The editor of Maryknoll magazine issued his statement here in connection with the CPA's sponsorship of February as Catholic Press Month.

Father Nevins said that the Catholic press not only informs its readers of life in the Church and their part in it, but "more importantly, they are formed to become apostolic imitators of their Divine Master." He added:

"The Catholic press is the voice of the hierarchy, of the teaching magisterium of the Church. For this reason the responsible Catholic insists on having Catholic publications in his or her home.

"Catholic Press Month 1962 marks another period of steady growth both in the number of vital publications and in total readership. The 141 Catholic newspapers of the United States and Canada now have an annual circulation of more than 270 million copies; our 405 magazines circulate more than 283 million copies a year — a total well over a half billion.

"Our publications have risen to new heights of professionalism. One indication of such acceptance is the increasing realization on the part of advertisers that the Catholic press is their key to the penetration of the fastest growing market in the United States and Canada."

Communion Issue May Hurt Anglican Unity Movement

By FATHER JOHN B. SHEERIN

That superb Broadway drama, "A Man For All Seasons," focuses its main attention on the conscience of St. Thomas More. He refused to accept King Henry's break with Rome and adamantly rejected Parliament's attempt to establish Henry as head of the Catholic Church in England.

Father Sheerin

Today the Church of England finds that many of its members are troubled in conscience over the question of intercommunion. Whereas Thomas More held for the maintenance of Catholic tradition, rebellious voices in the Church of England are calling for a radical departure from Catholic tradition. They claim that the doctrine of apostolic succession is not an essential Christian teaching and that Anglicans may receive communion from unordained clergymen.

The quarrel becomes more intense as the Church of England begins to take a larger part in the work for Christian Unity. Thirteen months ago, the Archbishop of Canterbury visited the acknowledged leader of the Orthodox Churches, Patriarch Athenagoras. Then he paid a "courtesy visit" to Pope John.

As he himself said, "For the first time in 400 years an archbishop of Canterbury has come officially to Rome not to air his own views or complaints but solely to show respect to His Holiness, the Pope, in the spirit of courtesy and Christian brotherhood." And Pope John, in return, said that the mutual cordially and sympathetic understanding generated by the meeting were important fruits of the visit even though the two leaders did not discuss dogmatic differences.

However, the Church of England seems somewhat uncertain as to the precise role it should play in reunion work. This hesitation was obvious at the World Council assembly at New Delhi. A very vocal group of delegates from the Church of England called for intercommunion so that an Anglican could receive communion from ministers of other faiths even if these ministers were unordained. The delegates complained that it is rather futile to talk about unity unless you take the first elementary steps on the way to reunion — the reception of communion from ministers of other faiths.

The Lambeth Conference of 1958 stated that: "Anglicans conscientiously hold that the celebrant of the Eucharist should have been ordained by a bishop standing in the historic succession . . ."

However, it must be remembered that Lambeth pronouncements are influential but not final and absolute. Therefore, according to a New York Herald-Tribune report by Richard C. Wald, a group of 32 prominent Anglican theologians wrote an open letter to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York in which they rejected the doctrine of apostolic succession. They said that they recognized that the "historic episcopate" has importance but also, we recognize that it is Our Lord who calls and commissions His ministers and that He is not tied to any one form of ministry."

They went on to assert that even unordained ministers can convey grace through communion and that Anglicans were under no obligation to refrain from receiving communion at the hands of OTHER churchmen.

Since the Lambeth decisions do not have binding force, only Parliament could definitely settle the controversy. But it is highly dubious that Parliament will do so.

"GLASS-HOUSE DWELLERS" TO THE RESCUE

college, their life's work can be planned in the framework of their primary vocation in life, namely, the salvation of the soul. Wise indeed will they be now to face seriously their careers, to come to grips with the matter and to be wise enough to seek and to accept advice.

Moreover they should make their future work the object of their prayers now, seeking always to know the will of God. If this is done, surely those careers which demand a measure of sacrifice will not be shot, as has been the case in recent years. Not only is there a shortage of vocations to the priesthood and religious life, but in all those secular professions which demand dedication and a spirit of sacrifice.

We wish all our youth in this year of decision in their lives the light of God to see His will and His strength to carry it out successfully.

Nearly $2000 Was Given To Burse Fund Last Week

Nearly $2,000 was donated to the Burse Fund in the past week, as more and more parishioners aided their local parish Burses.

St. Rose of Lima parish sent a check for $500 bringing the total donations for that parish's Burse to $4,500. Mr. Edward Melley of West Palm Beach sent $100, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Davidson donated $200 to be added to the St. Mary Cathedral parish Burse.

A donation of 10 bonds valued at $100 each were donated for the Visitation parish Burse, and other smaller donations accounted for the rest of the amount in this week's total.

A Burse is a sum of money, $20,000, which is invested so that its annual income will help provide for the training expenses of a seminarian each year. Once a particular recipient of this system has been ordained, the income is applied to another seminarian, so that ultimately a single Burse aids many candidates to the priesthood.

Burses are made up of large and small donations, from $1 up to many thousands of dollars. Some zealous Catholics provide for an entire Burse by themselves, which is then named after them or in memory of some loved one.

Pope Pius XII has declared that anyone who helps even one candidate to the priesthood has a share in all the future Masses and good works which will be his. In addition those who help the seminary program of the Diocese of Miami are remembered daily in the Masses and other prayers of the young men at St. John Vianney Minor seminary, Miami.

There are many ways in which you can help to make more Burses for the Diocese.

At the present time immediate financial contributions are needed to help provide for the nearly 170 men at the minor seminary. Many Catholics in the Diocese, among them those who are here just for vacation, will donate a specific sum. Others give a certain amount at set intervals.

But no matter how you donate, all good Catholics can remember the Burse fund in their will. No more fitting monument could be left to your memory than for you to help the Diocesan seminary program in this way. Use the following wording in your will,

"I hereby give, devise, and bequeath to The Most Reverend Coleman F. Carroll, as Bishop of Miami, a corporation sole, the amount of $--- for the Burse Fund of the Diocese of Miami."

Marriage Laws Unchanging

Last week Pope John used the occasion when the judges and lawyers of the Sacred Roman Rota visited him to speak of the confusion in the minds of many people concerning the Church's stand on marriage. He urged that every means should be used to dispel such ignorance, because the misconceptions so common today are causing grave harm.

Every priest knows from experience that this is true. Frequently it happens when a person is involved in an invalid marriage, he will seek to win favor for his case by stating, "I know a Catholic who . . ." He goes on to give an account of what he believes to be a marriage and divorce and re-marriage, as if to prove that the Church does change her mind in certain circumstances.

As Pope John pointed out, the stand of the Church against divorce was not designed by popes, bishops or priests. The prohibition is not merely a matter of Church law or a regulation of the Medieval Ages which could be changed at any time, as the laws governing fasting and abstinence are from time to time revised. Or is the Church hanging on to this unpopular conviction merely because she is stubborn or is afraid to lose face if she swings with almost all other religious groups now permitting divorce.

His Holiness stated that the Catholic attitude towards divorce reflects the will of God, not man. It is the law of the Creator, not the legislation of creatures. Because this is true, the Church cannot change her stand this year or next or a thousand years from now.

Much harm is done when "cases" of certain Catholics are presented as if the Church occasionally changes her mind or winks at an abuse. More information in these situations would always without exception show that the Church's stand on divorce and re-marriage is founded on sound principles reflecting the will of God. One of the reasons for the current marriage instructions being conducted in various parts of the diocese is to clear up such disturbing misconceptions.

Youth Looks To The Future

The Voice in highlighting the important subject of career guidance for young people in this issue stirs the reminder that youth today seem to "plan" their future more than in other generations. It used to be, as many adults can now sadly testify, that once a certain level in school was reached, grade, high school or even college, one sought "something to do."

Often as not a job was more or less fallen into, merely to get started on making a living, without any attempt to determine what kind of work was best suited for one's personality and aptitudes. Needless to say, considerable frustration and dissatisfaction resulted from such a square peg in a round hole situation.

Nowadays the trend is becoming more pronounced to appraise talent and abilities in such a way that they can be directed to the kind of work for which one is best equipped. This is a trend which should be heartily approved by our boys and girls.

With the guidance offered them in Catholic high school and

Some Mistaken Ideas About The Bible

By FATHER JAMES J. WALSH

We are often asked if the Protestant Bible is much different from the Catholic Bible, that is, if the King James version is radically different from our Douay version.

Father Walsh

The first obvious difference would be found in the translation. The style and choice of words vary greatly, even when the sense remains essentially the same.

The most notable difference is found in the size of the two Bibles. The Catholic one is longer, since we have in the Old Testament seven books and parts of two others which are not found in the King James Bible. All these books had been a part of the Christian Bible for many centuries throughout the world and were recognized as inspired. However, the early Protestant reformers for reasons of their own decided to exclude them from the list of sacred writings, as the Jews had done long ago.

Is it true that the Protestant leaders rescued the Bible from oblivion and made it possible for people to read and benefit from it? They still teach this from the pulpit in many southern states. But even the atheist historian would point out for 1400 years before the invention of printing, the Bible was kept in circulation by the Church which trained its scholars, especially monks in monasteries, to make handwritten copies of every word of Holy Writ.

Did every house have its Bible then? Of course not. Since it took one man a year or two or more to make a single Bible, one can imagine how expensive it was. When printing came along, the Bible overnight was changed from a very costly and enormously large volume to a treasure which even the poorest man could own.

Since Protestantism came along soon after the invention of printing and emphasized the Bible as the sole rule of faith and spread it in all directions, the word started making the rounds that Catholics were denied the Holy Scriptures and the Church had buried the book.

The same idea is contained in the often heard claim that Martin Luther was the first to give the Bible to the people in their own language, instead of in Latin. The fact is that before Luther translated the Bible, there were already available 14 editions in High German and five in Low German. There also existed 11 translations in Italian and 10 in French, and so on.

It used to be a hotly contested point, but no more, that the Bible was the sole rule of faith, that man should have no other authority or guide in learning truth. In other words, if it is not in the Bible, it is not true. This was opposed to the Catholic belief, that while the vast majority of Christian doctrine is in the Bible, not all of it is.

We have some truths which Christ gave to the Apostles and were not written down, but were "handed down" by the teaching Church founded by Christ. We call this Tradition. And for us it is just as reliable a source of truth as is the Bible, since the Catholic Church existed before the Bible and taught all its doctrines for many generations before all the books were assembled in one volume, such as today.

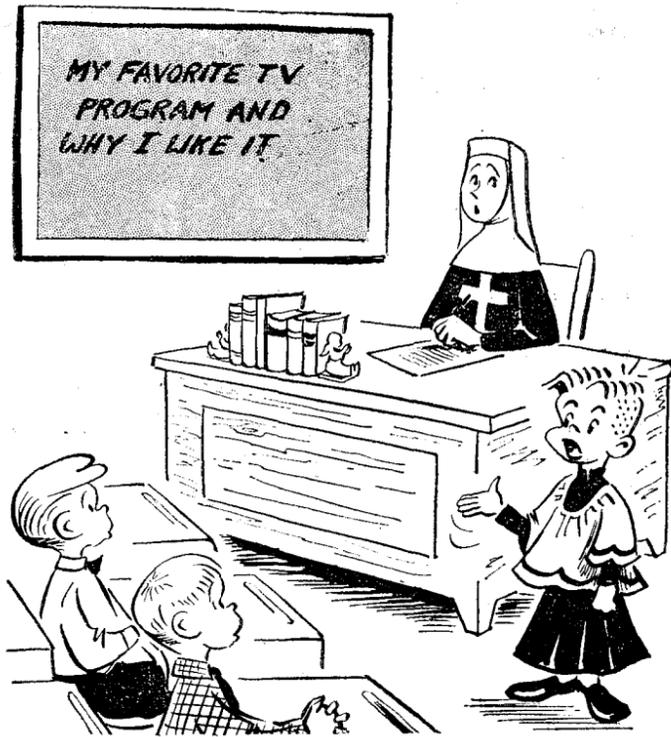

Modern liberal Protestants have not time for the old rule that one can believe only what is in the Bible. Modern theory of knowledge and biblical criticism has led some Protestant scholars, like Albert Knudsen a few years ago, to say that "The ultimate standard of truth must be found in the mind itself. The Bible or the Church cannot be the divinely inspired authority to make a proposition true. If true, it must be so in its own right."

As a result of this change of view, many Christians today outside the Catholic Church no longer consider the Bible as inspired by God. They look on it as a mere book of history, a great one, of course, but like other books, full of errors. Hence they interpret it as they wish, using their own minds as the standard of truth.

Our view, of course, is that the Bible is the most difficult book in the world. It came after the Church and was meant to be interpreted and taught only by the Church which had been founded precisely to teach and interpret the mind of God to His children. It needs an infallible guide, unless unity of belief is not desired. Once everyone interprets the Bible according to his own views and emotions countless contradictions are bound to spring up, and chaos follows, not truth.

The Church, far from keeping the Bible from us, begs us to read it! Especially the Gospels. Read it and realize why it is our greatest literary treasure, and the most precious document of God's love and concern for us.

A Simple Method Of Meditation

By FR. KILIAN MCGOWAN, C.P.

Prayer is life in miniature. Because life is a quest for God and prayer is seeking God in earnest. It is also one of the quickest and most effective ways of regaining tranquility of spirit and refreshment of heart. Meditation, or interior conversation with Our Lord, is truly the pause that Father Kilian refreshes. Therefore, it is essential to the make-up of even our busiest days.

Essentially, meditation is quite simple. It consists of thoughts that are productive of conversation with Christ. Not that it comes easy to our minds and hearts which at times are as disciplined as an errant playboy. However, the more we saturate our minds and memories with the thought of Christ, the more easily this conversation follows.

In prayer, a simple method — or framework for our conversation with Christ — can be a life-saver when devotion seems to have dried up, or when you are plagued by weariness or distractions. Here's a simple method that you may find helpful . . .

1) Getting Ready. You don't plunge into prayer like you dive into a pool of water. You have to take a firm hold of your memory, mind and heart before you can fix them on God in prayer. You place yourself in God's Holy Presence by resolutely and generously turning your memory and mind towards Him. Do it as though it's the most important action of your career.

2) Have Something To Talk About. The subject of your prayer is not the conversation itself, but it does supply the matter for your conversation. A firm foundation is laid for a fervent spiritual life by serious reflection on the meaning of life and the eternal truths. After that, immerse yourself in the study of the life, the thoughts and words, the actions and mysteries of Our Blessed Lord. You need the mind of Christ before you can imitate His divine manner of living and suffering. The Gospels, your own memory, or a good spiritual reading book can supply this material.

3) Being Attentive To God. Throughout your prayerful reflection strive to keep in contact with Our Blessed Lord. Take a scene from the life of Our Lord. Ask yourself: What is He doing, or saying? Why does He tell me this — or suffer like this for me? What does He expect of me? What should I do about it? What can I do for Him?

4) Letting Your Heart Speak. Your reflections on the life, words, or deeds of Our Lord should ignite a flame in your heart. It then bursts forth in acts or affections, as they are called. These are movements of your heart reaching out and drawing near to God. Your soul will speak to God with acts of adoration and thanksgiving, with acts of petition and love. This is the very heart of your conversation.

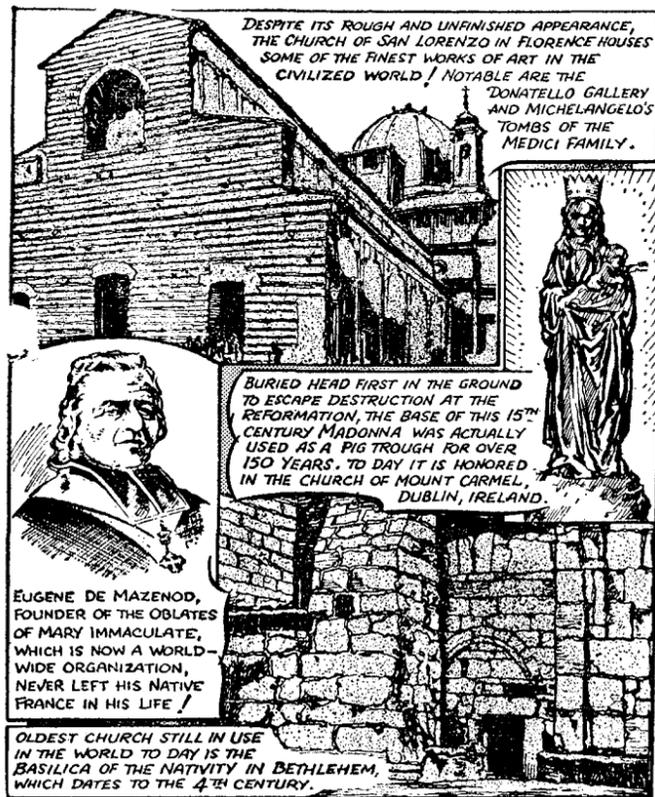

Make these acts simple and short. Let them be unburied and repeated. A simple movement of your soul can unite you with your God. Don't rush from one act to another . . . or try for a record in quantity. Above all, aim at acts of love of God which increase merit, remove sin, increase your friendship with Christ, and unite your heart immediately to God.

5) Concluding the Conversation. This conclusion is helpful, but not essential. Thank Our Lord for this daily audience. Ask His assistance for wherever you need special help. Make a firm resolution too to remove whatever obstacle hinders this daily contact with the Wisdom and Love of God. St. Teresa of Avila sums up all the above in one of her pithy paragraphs: "If we can we should occupy ourselves in looking at Him who is looking at us. Keep Him company. Talk to Him. Pray to Him. Humble yourselves before him. Find your delight in Him. Anyone can do this, even though he be a beginner at prayer, will derive great benefit from it." Why not try and find out for yourself?

A New Era Is Dawning In Latin America

Father McGuire is guest columnist for Msgr. George G. Higgins who is attending a meeting in Rome of the Lay Apostolate for forthcoming Ecumenical Council.

By FR. FREDERICK MCGUIRE
Executive Secretary,
Mission Secretariat

Late in January, a small meeting was held in Washington for the purpose of assisting superiors of religious congregations, specializing in teaching, to determine the type of education they might undertake in Latin America.

Among those who came from Latin America to advise in this matter were Archbishop Helder Camara, Auxiliary Bishop of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Father Tiago Cloin, C.S.S.R., Secretary of the Conference of Major Religious Superiors of Brazil, also from Rio de Janeiro, and Father Renato Poblete, S.J., Secretary of the Conference of Major Superiors of Religious Institutes in Chile, from Santiago.

THE YARDSTICK

These three men have made a deep study of the social and economic needs of our neighbors south of the border. Father Poblete has been engaged in a social study of the Church and her institutions in his native Chile. He is absolutely convinced that the Church must be to the fore in reforming the social order if the protagonists of Marxism are not to take over.

He is only too ready to admit that the social doctrines of the Church have made little impression on the ruling, wealthy classes in his country. In their opinion the teachers, by and large, have failed to inculcate the Christian social doctrines.

Bishop McGrath believes it is entirely possible to create a proper social conscience in these young people but it will not be done simply by preaching. He used to take small groups of young men with him on mission trips to rural areas. There they saw at first hand the miserable economic conditions of the tenant farmers. They lived for a few weeks at a time in the huts of the poor, ate the food of the poor and assisted the priest in his spiritual ministry. Upon their return to the classroom and their comfortable city homes, theirs was a completely different outlook.

Archbishop Helder Camara spoke of the millions of people in northeastern Brazil who must actually be moved from their present location or starve. He told us of the plans worked out between the government and the Church in which the Church has promised to lend all her prestige and her experience so that these well devised plans of the government may succeed.

Father Tiago Cloin has put behind Archbishop Camara the full force of the religious Conference of Brazil, the religious priests, Brothers and Sisters. As a result of this, there is every reason to expect that a new era is dawning in Latin America. The implementation of Pope John XXIII's encyclical "Mater et Magistra" (Christianity and Social Progress) has already begun!

New Cuban Envoy Arrives at Vatican

VATICAN CITY (NC) — A cool courtesy marked the reception of the credentials of Cuba's new ambassador to the Holy See by Pope John XXIII.

After Ambassador Luis Amado-Blanco y Fernandez presented his credentials, the Pope's customary greeting was short and pointed.

The customary expressions of good wishes for the chief of state and government were missing. The usual picture of the presentation ceremony was not published in L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican City daily.

The Cuban ambassador accompanied the presentation of his credentials with words of respect for Pope John and of hope for the success of his mission.

The Pontiff answered by expressing the wish that the ambassador's stay in Rome will be profitable.

The ceremony was followed by the customary private interview with the Pope in his private study, after which Ambassador Amado-Blanco called on the Papal Secretary of State.

Quebec Catholics Help Rebuild Anglican Church

VALLEYFIELD, Que. (NC) — The predominantly Catholic population of this city has pitched in to help rebuild St. Mark's Anglican church, destroyed by fire.

At the urging of Msgr. J.D. Cadieux, rector of the cathedral parish, many Catholics have made donations toward a new St. Mark's.

Chile Christian Democrats Gain Among Students, Labor

By Fr. John J. Bradley, M.M.

SANTIAGO, Chile (NC) — Results of student elections in Chile show that most of the youths enrolled in this South American country's seven universities are Christian Democrats.

The Catholic-oriented Christian Democratic party has also scored victories in recent labor union elections here.

More than 30,000 students elected a majority of Christian Democratic student officers at all Chilean universities — two run by the state, three operated by the Church and two under private control.

Observers here see the election results as politically important. In Latin America students have traditionally played a vastly more important and active role in politics than they have in the U.S.

A major reason for this is the fact that in Latin America politics is more closely related to intellectual life than in the U.S. This continent's political parties are based on systems of ideas, on ideologies, to a much greater extent than parties in the U.S.

Another reason is to be found in the fact that students in Latin American universities have a great deal more to say about how their schools are run than their U.S. counterparts. Students here have a major, if not predominant, voice in setting university policy and in deciding who will teach and what will be taught. This means that real power goes to the victors of student elections.

For a number of years the Communists have had a strong hold over many Latin American intellectuals and students as a result of the long predominance of leftist and anticlerical ideas in the continent's universities.

But recently, the growth of Catholic youth movements among both students and workers has promoted the growth of Christian Democratic political parties.

Scientist Says U.S. May Win In Space

PHILADELPHIA (NC) — Russia today is ahead in the field of space transportation but the U. S. may surpass the Soviets by 1970, Dr. Edward Teller said here.

The "father of the H-bomb" who is director of the University of California's Lawrence Radiation Laboratory, speaking at La Salle College about "What We Shall Find in Space," envisioned more complete control over environment and a super communications system. He cited a vast, global communications network for radio, television and telephone, totally accurate weather prediction and, eventually, weather control.

Bishop Boza Urges Spiritual War On Reds

WASHINGTON (NC) — Communism can be conquered only "in the realm of the spiritual, in the Christian ideal of living," the exiled Auxiliary Bishop of Havana, Cuba, said here.

"We cannot remain confined to a purely negative anti-communism," Bishop Eduardo Boza Masvidal told an NCWC News Service reporter. "We must take resource to a positive fight by removing the causes of communism. That is the Christian solution to the social and economic maladies of our people."

The greater the union among those who believe in Christian principles, the more fruitful the battle against communism will be, the Bishop said.

"The Western nations in Europe and in the Americas must bend their efforts in promoting an ideal that successfully can win over the minds and hearts of men," Bishop Boza said.

"We must all realize that communism cannot be fought only with social and economic measures. This is a war of ideologies. Communism wants to fight in the field of material things. We will be lost if we accept such a challenge. Our victory is in the realm of the spiritual, in the Christian ideal of living. In the socio-economic field, this means the right use and concept of wealth — that riches be used to promote the common good," the prelate added.

On his visit to the nation's capital Bishop Boza offered a special Mass in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart for a congregation of Cuban refugees settled in this area. The 46-year-old Bishop was expelled along with some 135 priests and Brothers from Cuba by the Castro regime last September. They were placed aboard a ship and sent to Spain.

Bishop Boza said there long has been an urgency in Cuba for a social change, but this must be accomplished by Christian principles, "never under the sign of a violent class struggle."

Bishop Boza said the move to establish a pro-Castro national church has failed. "Government propaganda has dropped the subject completely," he observed. "This failure speaks well for the deep-rooted Catholic Faith of the people and their common sense."

The tragedy of Cuba should be an example for other nations in the Americas, Bishop Boza said.

Real Rough Schedule

NEWARK, N. J. (NC) — Carrying a rough schedule in school? Like maybe three or four courses a day?

That's not much of a grind at all, according to Maryknoll Sister Ancilla Marie of Newark, who has spent 22 years as a teacher in the Philippines. She reports that students there take 10 courses a day, and the school day begins at 7:30 a.m. and ends at 5:30 p.m.

While we are sorry to inconvenience our friends we are happy to be able to provide better facilities with a first class banking house now under construction directly across the street from our present location. This new banking house will be architecturally artistic and functionally friendly. We trust that the trouble of parking, dust and general confusion occasioned by the erection of a magnificent building such as we have planned for Miami Shores will meet with the approval of all concerned. We realize it is our customers who have made this progressive step possible. There is still plenty of free parking space in the area.

Welfare Workers Warned Of 'Pollyanna Catholicism'

SAGINAW, Mich. (NC) — "We have too much Pollyanna Catholicism about us today. Religion can be discussed and sold like soap."

Frank J. Kelley, Michigan's new Attorney General, unloosed this verbal broadside at the annual Catholic Family Service luncheon here.

The Attorney General listed types of citizens who "make up a vociferous and active hindrance" to what is good for society — "even though they are the last to realize the deluded state of their social outlook."

He cited, for instance, the type of "conservative Christian" who has "great difficulty accepting labor unions." The Attorney General said: "He won't deny the explicit doctrine of his Church that working men have a natural right to organize. His attitude is: 'Unions are all right, but . . .'"

Kelley said the conservative Christian "has an allergy to anything that hints of international cooperation . . . His limited imagination can understand charity between individuals, but not between nations. He is often generous in helping the needy, the weak and the homeless — but let the government do the same thing internationally and he's in panic."

Kelley said "all conservatives tend to be suspicious of any move to lessen restrictions on immigration so that helpless refugees and impoverished humans can be admitted to this land of plenty. He coldly says 'Am I my brother's keeper?'"

As opposed to the "conservative Christian," Kelley cited the "ultraliberal." He observed: "As the conservative

Fla. Baptist College Gets U.S. Aid, Matthews Told

WASHINGTON (NC) — Overwhelming House passage of Federal aid for college construction came after debate brought out that the government had helped all colleges in a variety of other programs for 20 years.

vote of 319 to 79 a bill to provide $1.5 billion in five years in both loans and grants to cover part of the cost of building academic facilities.

The bill (H. R. 8900) would give Federal grants to cover one-third of the cost of each project and loans, to be repaid with interest within 50 years, to cover up to 75 per cent of the cost.

Some objectors to the proposal questioned the use of tax funds to assist church-related institutions, but there was no extended debate on this point.

Rep. Edith Green of Oregon, sponsor of the measure and chairman of the House special subcommittee on higher education, argued that the bill put forward no new form of aid for church-related colleges and universities.

She appeared on the floor armed with a summary of all Federal loans and grants to institutions of higher education to back up her position.

When a member inquired about funds for church-related institutions, she consulted her summary and pointed to colleges in the objector's district or state which had accepted either Federal loans or grants.

Rep. Billy Matthews of Florida charged the bill was the first to propose outright grants to church-related schools.

Mrs. Green denied this, adding: "Grants have been made by the Federal governments to all types of colleges and universities, private, public, church-related and non-church-related for the past 20 years."

She cited Stetson University in Matthew's home state. This institution in De Land, Fla., is operated by Southern Baptists.

Stetson, she said, has received in the past five years $105,416 from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare "that a might be part loans and part grants."

Mrs. Green also reported that Stetson has received $193,205 from the National Science Foundation. This is a quasi-governmental agency which distributes Federal funds to encourage research and other work in the basic sciences.

"I would say," she said, "that there are hundreds — I think that would be a conservative estimate — hundreds of colleges in the United States that are church-related or other private colleges, as well as public colleges, that have received both grants and loans in substantial amounts during the last several years."

The House bill requires applicants for Federal funds to show that the facility the government is aiding will not be used for "sectarian instruction," nor as a place for religious worship nor primarily in connection "with any part of the program of a school or department of divinity."

Private School Aid Still Barred

board aid — the maximum scope permitted by our Constitution."

The President did not spell out what he meant by "across-the-board" help.

NOT CLASSIFIED

But in the past Congressional session, official spokesmen for the administration indicated in legal memorandums that "special purpose" loans for parochial and other private schools — such as for science and mathematics facilities — might be constitutional and did not fall into the President's "across-the-board" classification.

House Speaker John McCormack of Massachusetts told newsmen here he cannot say if the climate has changed sufficiently in the House for passage of Federal aid to schools legislation. McCormack said his own view on aid to parochial and other private schools is the same.

The Speaker has said he thinks Federal aid in the form of loans can appropriately be extended parochial and other private schools, but he will support a bill that limits aid only to public schools.

"Every effort will be made to try to get a bill out if we can," McCormack said.

The President' bill for public school aid did not come to the House floor in the past session because the Rules Committee denied clearance for debate.

A watered-down version was prepared. It was to be brought to the floor by a parliamentary move skirting the Rules Committee, but the House voted 242 to 169 not to consider it.

In his new message, Kennedy said no task facing the nation is more important than expanding and improving educational opportunities of all Americans.

"The concept that every American deserves the opportunity to attain the highest level of education of which he is capable is not new to this administration — it is a traditional ideal of democracy.

"But is time that we moved toward the fulfillment of this ideal with more vigor and less delay," he wrote.

He called Federal aid for public school construction and teachers' salaries "imperative."

The principal pieces of legislation sought by Mr. Kennedy are already in Congress. He asked for Federal aid to colleges, and scholarships for needy students, proposals which were before the Senate at the time of his message.

The bill to aid medical and dental schools is also in Congress. It proposes a ten-year program of matching grants to expand existing schools and construct at least 20 new medical schools and an equal number of dental schools. In the first five years, the cost would be about $600 million, in fiscal 1963, $9 million.

Other Kennedy proposals include:

— Expansion of the National Science Foundation's program to further scientific and engineering education in high schools. Cost would be about $96 million, administration sources said.

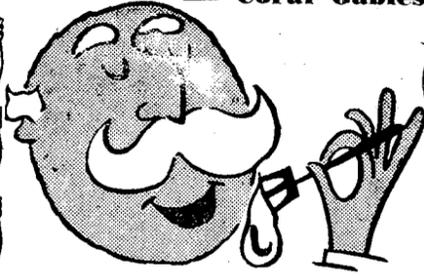

— Matching grants to states to build educational television stations. The cost was estimated at about $26 million in five years.

— A program of scholarships for grade and high school teachers for a year of advanced study and other steps to "improve educational quality." The estimated cost is about $747 million.

— Broadening the present program of Federal aid to train teachers of mentally retarded to include help for training of teachers of all handicapped youngsters. A five-year, $47 million cost was estimated.

Senate Passes Bill To Aid Public, Private Colleges

WASHINGTON (NC) — The Senate passed a $2.67 billion aid program providing for construction loans and scholarships for public and private colleges. Final vote was 69-17.

The measure now goes to conference with the House which passed a $1.5 billion bill for construction funds but no scholarships.

The religious issue was raised in the Senate during debate prior to the vote on its program of Federal aid to higher education.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., of North Carolina introduced an amendment to limit Federal aid to public institutions.

Ervin noted that the original bill made no distinction between public and private institutions, including those conducted by church groups, in assigning aid.

He said this "clearly violates" the First Amendment to the Constitution. He stated this amendment "prohibits Congress from giving aid to any institution for the purpose of teaching the tenets of any religion."

Another amendment was introduced by Sen. Pat McNamara of Michigan to broaden the aid bill to include grants for construction of public grade and high schools.

Supporters of the administration's college aid plan moved quickly to head off controversy over the religious question raised by the Ervin amendment.

STUART — Eleven postulants and four novices of the Sisters of St. Joseph of St. Augustine will participate in ceremonies of reception and profession Sunday, Feb. 11.

Msgr. James F. Enright, Miami Vicar for Religious will officiate at investiture of novices during noon Mass in St. Joseph Church. Msgr. John J. Fitzpatrick, pastor, Little Flower parish, Hollywood, will preach the sermon.

First vows will be professed by novices at 8 a.m. in the Chapel of Mt. St. Joseph Novitiate, Jensen Beach. Bishop Eduardo Dalmau, C.P. will receive the vows of Sister Maria Giovanni, Holy Family parish, North Miami; Sister Miriam Francis, St. Stephen parish, West Hollywood; Sister Mary Carmel, Our Lady of Lourdes parish, Melbourne and Sister Rose Margaret of Puerto Rico.

Father Louis A. Wheeler, S.J. will preach the sermon.

Sister Margaret Joseph of Christ the King parish, Jacksonville, will make profession of final vows.

Five young women from the Diocese of Miami are among postulants who will receive the black habit and white veil of the order. They are Susan Laderman, Gesu parish; Marilyn Adele Wheeler, and Patricia Agnes Sullivan, St. Juliana parish, West Palm Beach; Catherine Lorraine Seese, St. Anthony parish, Fort Lauderdale; and Joanne Marie Wolfkill, Holy Family parish, North Miami. Other postulants who will be vested as novices are Margaret Rose Canty, St. Mary parish, Rockledge; Mary Lyn Payette and Marlene Payette, Our Lady of Lourdes parish, Melbourne; Judy Ann Williams, Our Lady of the Angels parish, Jacksonville; Sheila Ann White, St. Paul parish, Jacksonville and Joyce Ann Klemmer, St. James parish, Falls Church, Va.

Music during profession ceremonies will be sung by the Novices Choir under the direction of Sister Michael John, S.S.J. accompanied by Sister Ann Raymond, S.S.J. at the organ. Professed Sisters and Novices will sing during the Mass for the Investiture in St. Joseph Church.

White-Tite's Active Management, Daily Inspection Assure Quality Roof Coating

Active participation by management and daily inspection of all jobs are two of the "behind the scenes" reasons for the outstanding success of White-Tite, Inc., World's Largest Roof Cleaning-Sealing-Coating firm.

White-Tite through the years has been constantly increasing the services offered and quality of coating. Many people do not realize that in spite of the many advances made by White-Tite through the years, their roof coating costs no more today than it did in 1955, although in the last seven years labor and material costs have risen greatly.

The management of White-Tite may be considered "old school" in that Jesse Scalzo, president, and Bill Snyder, general manager, are in the office every working day at 5:30 a.m. to set up the day's schedules. They do not pass on this important planning to a subordinate just so they can sleep late. They know that the proper start is necessary if the best work is to be done each day.

Once the crews have been assigned and are on their way to their assigned areas, there is a short time for a break and breakfast. But the "break" doesn't last long. Early in the day Scalzo and Snyder start out in separate cars to begin inspections of work done the previous day and work currently under way.

This daily inspection of all

IT'S A FACT, the newsprint this picture is printed on cannot compare with the brilliant whiteness of a White-Tite roof. The flat tile shown above on the roof of the Sorrento Villas, 7510 Harding Ave., Miami Beach, was cleaned, sealed and coated by White-Tite in June, 1961, and is as beautiful today as it was upon completion. According to the firm's guarantee, this roof will stay beautifully white and free of mold, mildew and fungus for two years and more.

work is not done to "check up on the men" or "catch them loafing," but rather to see if any customer has any particular request and to be sure that the customer is receiving the best coating job possible, and exactly according to the terms of the contract.

"You must be satisfied with your roof coating," says Scalzo. "This constant inspection assures you that the White-Tite coating which may cost a little more is worth a lot more."

All the inspection in the world means nothing if the person making the inspection does not know his job. Here again, the executives of White-Tite excel. Scalzo has had 16 years of experience in the roofing and roof coating business and developed the White-Tite process 16 years ago. Snyder was working at the same roofing company as Scalzo when the White-Tite process was developed. He has had 24 years of experience in the roofing and roof coating business.

The four-day cleaning-sealing-coating process which White-Tite perfected has become the guiding principle of many roof coaters. Before White-Tite, many firms tried to do all cleaning and coating the same day (some still do). The White-Tite process requires four separate days to complete. Each step, each application, must be thoroughly dry before the next is put on. This assures 100 per cent bonding . . . a longer lasting coating.

The exclusive White-Tite sealing process for tile roofs rebinds all loose tile, provides better drainage, gives extra protection from hurricane winds and helps the waterproof roof deck beneath the tile to last longer.

White-Tite also has an exclusive three-coat process for gravel roofs which has been proven in use to permanently bind gravel to the roof, make the home cooler and help the roof last longer.

Whether on tile or gravel, all roof coating by White-Tite is unconditionally guaranteed for two years, with a five year warranty. When White-Tite does the job they will return anytime in the next two years to clean sidewalks, walls, patio, pool, awnings and screens free of charge when the customer calls.

"You can pay cash or finance your White-Tite roof coating," explained Snyder. "Very important for those who like to save money is the fact that there is no interest charge on financing at White-Tite."

White-Tite, Inc., is licensed and insured and is a member of the Miami-Dade County Chamber of Commerce and the Greater Fort Lauderdale Chamber of Commerce.

"We are proud of the fact that today many architects and builders are recommending White-Tite," Scalzo exclaimed. "Do not accept a substitute because nothing else is as good as White-Tite. The material we use is exclusive with us . . . it is not available from any stores or from any other roof coater. Nothing else is as good as White-Tite."

Gaetano Cardinal Cicognani, Dies at 80

ROME (NC) — A pontifical Requiem Mass was offered here for Gaetano Cardinal Cicognani, 80, a veteran of 38 years of diplomatic service for the Holy See and brother of Amleto Cardinal Cicognani, former Apostolic Delegate to the U. S.

The Cardinal, who was Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Rites, which deals with the canonization of saints, died in Rome of a heart attack. He received the last rites of the Church shortly before his death. Pope John XXIII sent him a special blessing.

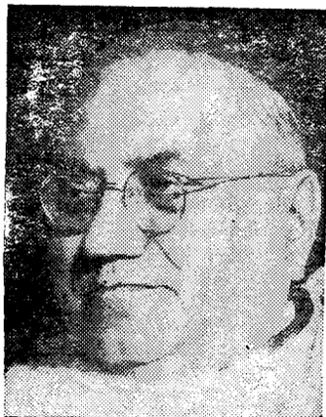

Present at the deathbed of the Cardinal was his brother, Amleto Cardinal Cicognani, Vatican Secretary of State.

Gaetano Cardinal Cicognani climaxed his long and distinguished career in the Vatican diplomatic corps by embarking on another one in December, 1953, when he was named Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Rites.

As a diplomat and as head of the congregation which "makes saints," Cardinal Cicognani shunned the limelight.

He once stated: "The World is not made, and much less rebuilt, on battlefields, but rather at debates of ideas — debates spurred by a quest of truth."

The death of Cardinal Cicognani and of Teodosio Cardinal de Gouveia, Archbishop of Lourenco Marques, Mozambique, on the following day (Feb. 6) leaves the College of Cardinals with a total of 78

CARDINAL CICOGNANI

members, 27 Italians and 51 non-Italians.

Gaetano Cicognani was born in Brisighella, Italy, in 1881, studied at the diocesan seminary there and was ordained in Rome on Sept. 24, 1904.

DIPLOMATIC STUDIES

After service on the tribunal of the Sacred Roman Rota, high Church court of appeals, and as a professor of canon law at the Apollinaris Pontifical Seminary in Rome, he entered the Pontifical Ecclesiastical Academy and completed diplomatic studies there.

In early 1915 he was appointed an apprentice in the Vatican Secretariat of State. He was named a papal chamberlain and transferred to the papal nunciature in Spain.

In 1920, he was appointed auditor of the nunciature in Belgium during the difficult period of postwar reconstruction. In 1924, he was named internuncio to Bolivia and Titular Archbishop in 1925.

During the three years he was at La Paz, Bolivia, he traveled extensively and became familiar with much of the South American continent.

Archbishop Cicognani was transferred to the nunciature at Lima, Peru, in 1928, where he remained eight years. In 1935 he was named papal legate to the Peruvian National Eucharistic Congress.

The Archbishop was transferred to Vienna in 1936, and in 1938 he was named apostolic nuncio to Spain. His service there — at a time when the country was in the grip of civil war — was one of the highlights of his diplomatic career.

The Archbishop concentrated his driving force on solving the problems of war-devastated churches, seminaries and religious houses, in promoting Catholic Action, and in walking the tightrope of neutrality during World War II — when both Allied and Axis powers maintained diplomatic representatives in Spain.

Archbishop Cicognani was named a cardinal at the consistory of Jan. 12, 1953, and in December, 1952, he was named Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Rites.

Beatification causes brought to a successful conclusion under the Cardinal's leadership included those of the 56 martyrs of the Boxer Rebellion, and Blessed Innocent XI, the 17th Century pope who was beatified in October, 1956.

Africa Cardinal de Gouveia Dies At 72 In Mozambique

LOURENCO MARQUES, Mozambique (NC) — Teodosio Cardinal de Gouveia, Archbishop of Lourenco Marques, has died here at the age of 72 after a long battle against leukemia.

He was the second cardinal to die within 24 hours.

His death in a general hospital here leaves Africa with only one cardinal, Laurean Cardinal Rugambwa, Bishop of Bukoba, Tanganyika. Shortly before his death, Cardinal de Gouveia received a message and a blessing from Pope John XXIII.

CARDINAL DE GOUVEIA

ated a cardinal by Pope Pius XII on February 18, 1946.

For 14 years the only cardinal on the Africa continent, he was uncompromising in upholding Portuguese rule in Mozambique. When the independence movement in Angola — the huge Portuguese-ruled territory in western Africa — erupted into violence early in 1961, Cardinal de Gouveia was quick to issue a public call for prayers for the triumph of the motherland.

Mozambique showed none of the signs of growing nationalism that resulted in bloodshed in her sister territory.

Cardinal de Gouveia was born to a poor, peasant family in Funchal, in the Madeira islands. He was educated at the Funchal diocesan seminary, and later under the Vincentian Fathers in Paris, before being sent to the Portuguese College in Rome.

Ordination came on Easter Sunday of 1919. He served his early years as a priest in Portugal, but was recalled to Rome in 1929 to serve on the faculty of the Portuguese College.

Named a bishop by Pope Pius XI in 1936, he was put in charge of the missions in Mozambique. He became first Archbishop of Lourenco Marques in 1941, and was cre-

They Get Some Lessons On TV

By MARJORIE L. FILLYAW

Valuable contributions made by educational television definitely outweigh the disadvantages in the opinion of the various religious who administer schools within the Miami Diocese.

According to Msgr. William F. McKeever, superintendent of South Florida's diocesan schools, six of which daily utilize the telelessons beamed by ETV, Channel 2 in Miami, present programs provide "a good source of enrichment for the courses that are offered and show great promise in the future."

Studies are now in progress, he revealed, with a view to installing closed circuit television in diocesan schools. "Necessary conduits should be installed in future buildings," he added, "and classrooms should be designed with the expectation that television will be installed."

OTHERS 'ENTHUSIASTIC'

A variety of courses are presented on Channel 2 which was inaugurated in the fall of 1957 with civic aid and a grant of $38,760 from the Ford Foundation. Such subjects are science, geography, history, Spanish, literature, and even a program for kindergarten or pre-school children are viewed at St. James School, North Miami; St. Joseph and St. Patrick Schools, Miami Beach; Sacred Heart School, Homestead; Epiphany School, South Miami and St. Matthew School, Hallandale.

Results of a recent survey conducted by the Miami Diocese Department of Education indicated conclusively that other diocesan schools are enthusiastic about the ETV but are either too far away for satisfactory reception or do not yet have proper facilities for its use.

At St. James School where Adrian Dominican Sisters teach in grades kindergarten through eight and the ETV has been used in classrooms for the past two years, Sister Thomas Raymond, O. P., Principal, emphasized that the time and research which obviously goes into the preparation of the telelessons is, in many cases, over and above what the regular classroom teacher is able to do.

TEACHING AIDS USED

"Excellent audio-visual aids are used which correlate well with the area of study," she pointed out, adding that "these would be difficult to have on hand so readily in regular classroom presentation." Since the presentation is done for the teacher, Sister Thomas Raymond said, the instructor is able to spend more time on the planning of the background reading and projects for the pupils.

Because telelessons last only 27 minutes, the student needs to consult more sources than his basic text, Sister noted, and if encouraged and directed properly by the classroom teacher, he will become adept at using encyclopedias, dictionaries, atlases, almanacs, supplementary texts and other reference books.

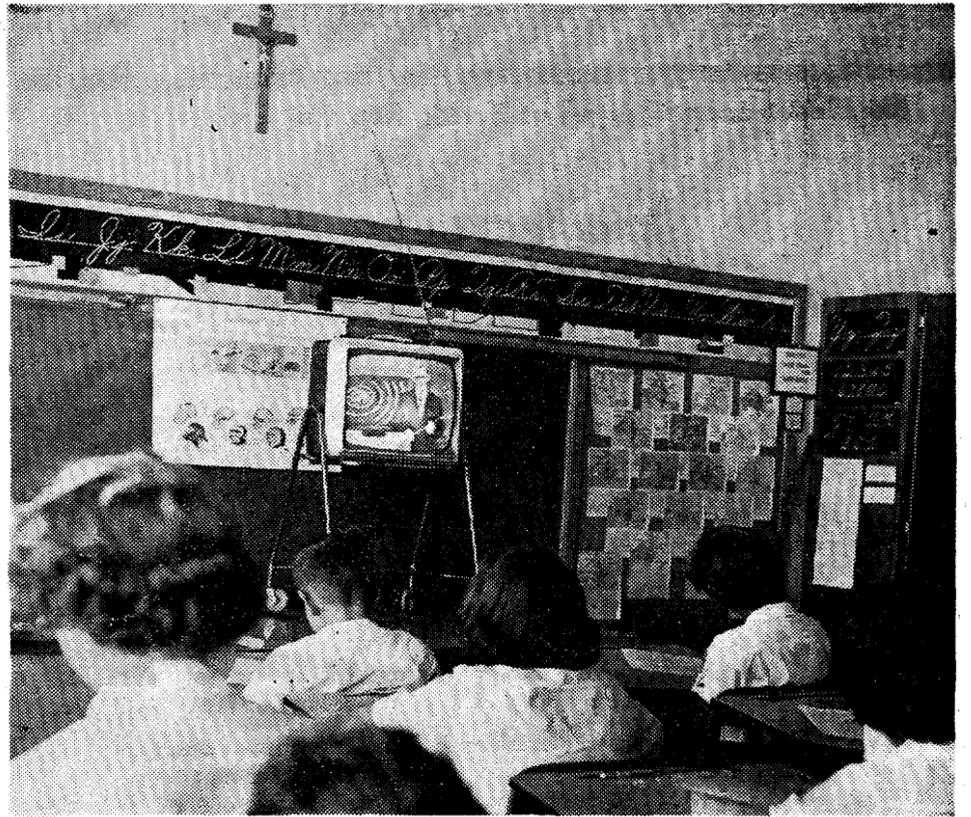

In addition, she stated, the art of note-taking so essential at the high school and college levels, is developed as pupils concentrate on the lesson and makes notes. Portable TV sets easily transported from one classroom to another are used at St. James which has equipped one room with black-out drapes.

Auditorium presentation of telelessons is not as satisfactory as ETV in the classroom in the opinion of Sister Mary Gabriel of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Baden, Pa., who staff Holy Rosary School, Perrine. Although Channel 2 courses are not yet available to pupils of that parochial school due to a lack of facilities. Sister Mary Gabriel is a veteran of four years experience with ETV in Pittsburgh, Pa., where the Ford Foundation conducted its first experiments.

"Best results have come when the set is used in the classroom with the ordinary class viewing it as a part of the daily work," Sister said. "Large numbers of students seem to get the feeling that they don't have to participate."

At St. Joseph School where ETV lessons in science, history, Spanish, and literature are utilized in addition to newscasts, Sister M. Colette, O.P., said that "an elementary school teacher cannot be proficient in all the subjects required so we feel that our classes profit from the material presented by TV instructors who are specialists in their particular fields and have much to offer in each subject."

Sister Mary Frederic, principal of St. Theresa School, Coral Gables, which is staffed by Sisters of St. Joseph of St. Augustine, believes that "TV is the greatest medium of communication that we have today and that it has tremendous potential for learning. However," Sister added, "as Pope Pius XII warned us, it is the obligation of each one of us to help fashion it so that it will work advantageously and not to human detriment."

Although St. Theresa School does not yet have TV sets in the classrooms, Sister Mary Frederic believes that "TV in the schools is an absolute necessity."

Choosing The Right College

Because choosing the right college or vocational school is no easy matter the student and his parents should thoroughly explore two things beforehand: first, the student's desired program of studies, his goals and the vocation he has in mind, and secondly, the ability of the school to serve his specific educational needs.

If he has well-defined inclinations toward a specialization, his vocational needs may be better met by a specialized school than by a liberal arts college. If, on the other hand, his vocational inclinations are not yet firm, he is better advised to choose a liberal arts program which will of itself help him to clarify his goals, and which will provide a general preparation for any life work.

Students today are usually advised to select a number of colleges or schools that seem appealing and to apply to each of them for admission. Enrollments at some schools are so high that many candidates who apply are not accepted. Much heartbreak can be avoided, therefore, if a student files an application at several schools, not just his first choice.

The careful reading of catalogs and bulletins that list courses will result in a limiting of the range of choices. Some schools, at first thought to be possibilities, will be found unsuitable or out of the question for the student because of one or more reasons — travel, expense, limited fields of study, and so on.

Other schools will arouse greater interest and preference. If possible, the student should visit these latter schools to be able to evaluate them more thoroughly than is possible from reading about them. He should also talk with as many people as possible who know these schools and who know them in different ways — as educators, as alumni, as students or as pastors of their graduates.

While this period of inquiry is under way, the student has to ask questions and weigh answers in terms of his own needs and abilities. To do this well, he needs the help and guidance of several intelligent people who have no personal stake in his decision. He must also ask others who do have a personal interest in his future.

Applying for admission to a school is often a complex and puzzling experience involving many details and deadlines. The student can, however, be quite sure that it will be a valuable experience and one in which he will meet with much courtesy and kindness.

For those who expect to be graduated from high school in June, it is not too early now to begin making application. The form itself requires pertinent information about the student's background, extracurricular activities, honors, and such. Sometimes an essay is requested as part of the application.

A complete transcript of the student's high school record must also be filed with the application. This record is evaluated to determine if the applicant meets the academic requirements of college or vocational work.

Entrance tests are nearly always required for admission. Some colleges administer their own standardized tests, others refer applicants to testing centers near their homes. The testing needed for college admission usually includes a scholastic aptitude test of verbal and mathematical ability. Many vocational schools have special tests which are administered to reveal if the candidate has either the native ability or inclination needed to succeed in the specific vocation and to be happy in it.

The boy or girl who applies for admission to a school must also furnish letters of recommendation. These are expected to tell something of the applicant's character and general adjustment. They are obtained from his pastor, teachers, and one or two professional or business people who know him well.

Biscayne College Scholarship Announced

One student from each Catholic boy's high school in the Miami Diocese will receive a full-tuition scholarship from Biscayne College, which is scheduled to open its doors to a freshman class in September.

Recipients will be selected by the high school principals.

Biscayne College, located on the Palmetto Expressway at 32nd Avenue, just north of Opa-locka and west of the Golden Glades Interchange, announced the scholarships in a brochure.

For the present, the college will have facilities only for students living off campus with their immediate families. A permanent, air-conditioned structure of reinforced concrete will be ready for the first class in September. It will house classrooms, laboratories, faculty and administration offices, a library, student lounges and chapel. There will also be a parking lot for 100 cars and fields for athletic activity.

The college will open with registration of students Sept. 20 and classes will begin Sept. 24.

In order to enter the college, a student must have graduated from an approved high school with grades that correspond to those recommended for college and must have a recommendation from the school principal or guidance officer. He must present his scores on the college entrance examinations, both the morning and afternoon tests. Times and locations of the tests can be obtained from high school instructors.

The schedule will give ample opportunity to students who need to work to implement their expenses.

The first men's Catholic college in the Miami Diocese will be under the instruction and supervision of the Augustinian Fathers of Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. Rector of the college is Father Edward McCarthy, O.S.A.

Information can be obtained by writing to Admissions Office, Biscayne College, Box 746, Opa-locka, Fla.

Barry Now In 22nd Year Has Enrollment Of 800

Now in its 22nd year of operation as a fine arts college, Barry College for women, administered by the Adrian Dominican Sisters, is located on an 85-acre tract between NE 111th and 115th Streets in Miami Shores.

When the only Catholic women's college south of Washington, D. C. opened for the first time in 1940 there were 30 students from Florida and half a dozen other states enrolled. Today almost 800 students registered represent 27 states, three territories and 13 foreign countries.

Students completing the four-year requirements may be prepared as teachers; elementary or secondary in art, music or physical education; social workers; nurses for hospitals, public agencies or industry; research workers, laboratory technicians, medical students, medical technologists or food and drug research scientists; dietitians, food or textile research workers, buyers, demonstrators, or home makers; journalists, interpreters, translators or foreign service workers; commercial artists or art consultants; concert artists — instrumental or vocal, private music teachers; librarians, school and public; and secretaries.

For those students who do not wish to fulfill the requirements for a four-year degree, Barry offers a two-year secretarial science terminal course which prepares students for positions in the world of business. This same course may be utilized also as a minor field of study with a liberal arts degree.

A major is offered in nursing for the Bachelor of Science in nursing degree and the Department of Nursing is fully approved by the Florida State Board of Nursing. The collegiate nursing course offers study and classes on campus with basic clinical experience offered at St. Francis Hospital, Miami Beach and specialized experience in local agencies.

Sedes Sapientiae Hall, opened in 1955, provides a modern and fully equipped building where music, drama, speech, painting and sculpture are included in the courses of Fine Arts study.

Extracurricular activities at Barry College include the culture series which is presented in the 1,000-seat auditorium and annually brings to Miami outstanding lecturers, musicians and stage personalities; a full schedule of theatrical events presented by the Barry Playhouse; Angelicus, the college newspaper; Torch and Shield, the yearbook, the Tara Singers choral group, and Cor Jesu Choir.

Results of the morning tests should be forwarded to the college as soon as possible with afternoon results sent later. Afternoon test subjects will vary according to the student's intended course of studies, and morning tests will be more general.

Those wishing to follow science programs will be tested in advanced mathematics, chemistry or physics and English. Humanities and business students will be tested in English, a modern language and social studies.

Courses in the college will lead to a Bachelor of Arts degree, a Bachelor of Science degree or a degree in Business Administration.

Formal instruction in Theology will be required of all Catholic students but will be waived for non-Catholic students.

Classes will be held from 8:40 a.m. to 4:40 p.m. Monday through Friday with a weekly schedule for most students of 16 to 18 hours of classes a week.

Higher Education Can Be Rewarding Or Disaster

(Reprinted from "It's Your Life" published by Harcourt, Brace and Company)

"Your young intellects are open to life, eager to know, and nature is open to you with her marvels and mysteries. The problems of existence, human facts, your aspirations, the goal to aim for, the roads to follow, the means to use — everything is a question. Everything demands the clarity of light and precise answer." Pius XII.

Your Investment In Education

You live in an age when education beyond high school really "pays off." Economists have estimated that the difference in the life-time income of the high school and college graduate is approximately $103,000. Subtract the comparative low cost of a college education, and it becomes obvious that the returns from such an educational investment are great.

Apparently, this fact and the requirements of business and industry have had an effect in the increase of college enrollments. A "tidal wave" of students is now sweeping upon the colleges, and, as a result, the college admission officers are forced to become more selective.

But why should one seek higher education, apart from these practical motives? Some go because of parental pressure, or for prestige, social life, contacts, to find a husband or wife, or merely because "it's the thing to do." A Catholic pupil should seek college or its equivalent because it can better fit him to be a responsible citizen of two worlds — earth and heaven; it can help him to improve his mind, appreciate culture, and understand his religion. If you don't have sound and solid motives for expending the time, energy, and money that college demands, then your chances of "washing out" are very real. It may be "glamorous" to go to college, but you can improve your odds for staying in college until graduation if you carefully choose both the course and the college. Once you have determined that you have the desire and ability for higher education, there are a few basic questions to be answered.

Should you go first to college or into the service?

This is the question that faces most able-bodied young men. The answer, however, is not complex. If you have the talent for more advanced study, you can serve your country and your Church best by going to college first; later, you will be in a better position to obtain a commission or a higher rank in the armed forces. The R.O.T.C., National Guard, Marine Platoon Leader Classes, and some Reserve plans of all branches allow you to continue your education while fulfilling your military obligation; each permits you to prepare for an officer's position in the branch of your choice. Some will find advantageous the Six-Month Active Duty Plan upon graduation from high school or college.

What type of post-graduate education should you seek?

Previously, the many methods of education beyond high school were discussed. But even when you narrow your choice down to college instruction, you still have great variety in that type of school. Depending on your interests, abilities, and aptitude, you must decide between junior colleges, technical institutes, liberal arts and science colleges, or specialized colleges (such as in business, music, education, forestry, pharmacy, etc.) After you decide on which of these degree-granting institutions best fits your needs, you will learn of selection if you wish to go on for further professional education (as in law, medicine, dentistry, optometry, social service, etc.). Surely, all this should point up the necessity for early planning and consultation with your school counselor.

Should you go to a Catholic college?

For the most part, that is an easy one. Canon law requires both you and your parents to see that you continue your studies in a Catholic educational environment, unless you can present serious reasons for going to a secular institution instead. Reasons such as these could be valid; you or your parents honestly can't afford the tuition, you can't obtain the course of study you need in a nearby Catholic college, you can't gain admission to a Catholic institution, or there are no Catholic colleges in your locality. However, when you examine your conscience, many of these objections evaporate. The tuition in most Catholic universities is lower than that in comparable private colleges. Opportunities of working your way through college are increasingly present, and grants-in-aid are also available. Since there are nearly 300 Catholic colleges in the United States, which offer courses in a great variety of fields, such objections grow weak today.

CONFUSED OUTLOOK

In a secular college, on the other hand, he will gain only a confused and fragmentary outlook on the world, since he will be taught by professors who are confused and who disagree among themselves as to basic truths and values. A few of his teachers will probably assail the Church as an adversary of science and progress. Others will show themselves polite but condescending toward his religious persuasions.

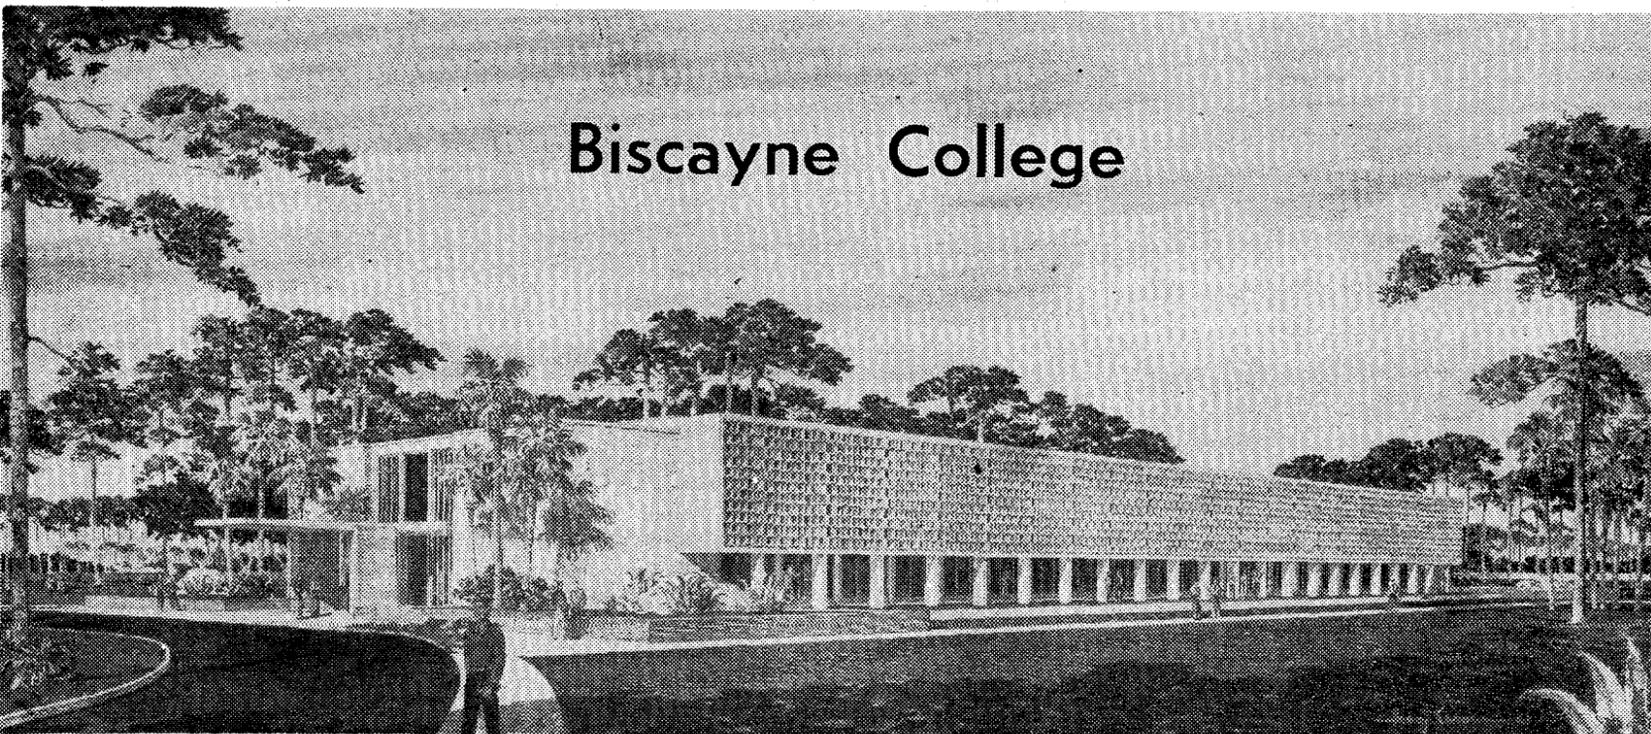

Still others will be apparently unaware that any educated American of our day could take the Christian dogmas seriously. In such an environment he may easily hear more against the faith in a single day than he would be able to refute in a life-time.

The reaction of the Catholic student will vary according to his individuality, but the general pattern is fairly uniform. To begin with, he will be inclined to raise objections when overt attacks are made on the faith.

Are there any advantages to attending a secular college, even in terms of material success and social prestige? Frankly, I do not believe so, though I can see that people might easily be led to believe that there are such advantages. My own observation is that the Catholics whom I knew at college were not particularly admired. In the more snobbish groups, at least, they were looked down on for their religion, and perhaps even more so for not being faithful to that religion. Many developed a sort of inferiority complex with regard to their religious and social background, although they should rather have been proud of the spiritual riches of their forebears.

At law school, on the other hand, I noticed that the students who came from Catholic colleges were much better equipped to meet the difficulties of the situation.

The woman is Barry's business.*

The woman is the bearer of life, the protector of that which has been born. Whatever her walk in life - - the home, the arts, the professions - - her role is the special one, to engender, to foster, to nurture, to preserve. It is the role of motherhood. In whatever her state, if she is to realize her unique character and make her essential contribution, she must fulfill her possibilities for the motherhood of the spirit. For this she must be prepared.

*Barry educates the woman in the same Christian intellectual and cultural tradition that gave birth to the modern ideals our nation is striving to preserve. If it is important to develop the nation's resources and strengthen its strategic defenses, it is even more important to reawaken its ideology and inculcate its ideals. Barry College prepares its women to fulfill these tasks through the liberal arts core of studies required in all curricula. Scholarships In Agriculture Are Open To Dade Students

For the fourth year, the Agriculture Division of the Miami-Dade County Chamber of Commerce is making plans to award $225 scholarships to students who plan to follow courses in agriculture or Home Economics. Ellis Clark, director of the division, said the scholarships are awarded through funds received from a "Farm Festival" which is held each year. Sixteen scholarships have been awarded since the program got under way four years ago.

Recipients can attend the schools of their choice as long as they follow the above-mentioned courses. Clark said the scholarships are available for men and women and are awarded according to the decision of a committee of judges within the agriculture division.

The number awarded is entirely dependent upon the financial outcome of the festival. This year's festival will be held at the Boyd Picnic Ground on the Boyd Dairy Farm, west of the Miami airport at a date in the middle of April to be announced.

Students interested in applying for the scholarships should ask school officials for information or go to County Agriculture Agency offices in Miami or Homestead.

Winners will be notified early in the summer and will receive checks prior to September.

Nurse Training Gives A Woman Varied Abilities

The years of training that go into the making of a nurse equip her not only for her professional career, but round-out her ability to perform tasks required of women in many walks of life.

The habits of study and concentration that she learns in nursing school never lose their value. Her appreciation of good health and how to keep it enables her to look after herself, her family, and later in life, her own children.

The cleanliness that is stressed in nursing school becomes part of her character. Serving others — the goal of nursing and of every other profession — lifts her duties above the category of a mere job and into the realm of a vocation.

ADDITIONAL ADVANTAGE

By training under Catholic auspices, the candidate has the additional advantage of deepening her knowledge of the Faith at the same time that she delves into the wonders of medical science. In a Catholic atmosphere, she can learn to supernaturalize her work through prayer and dedication. As a consequence, the duties she performs have value in heaven as well as in the hospital, the clinic and the nursing home.

If the student enrolls for a four-year college program, her academic studies usually cover biology, chemistry, psychology, physical education, philosophy and theology. That part of her training which is specifically professional includes various phases of nursing: medical, surgical, maternity, psychiatric, public health and tuberculosis nursing.

At many nearby schools, the professional part of her education is obtained at an accredited hospital. Throughout her course work, the student is prepared to take the State Board Examination for the registration of professional nurses.

A young girl needn't wait until she is a high school senior before thinking seriously of becoming a nurse. At many hospitals and nursing homes there are part-time programs available which enable high school students to assist the nursing staff in various ways.

By means of such voluntary training, the student gets firsthand experience in working among patients. She is better able to appraise nursing profession and to determine if it is really the path in life that she desires to follow.

Should she decide in the affirmative and enroll in a school of nursing, or wish to become a practical nurse, her earlier experience as an aide will be invaluable.

High school girls who feel attracted to nursing should talk the matter over with their parents and then get in touch with a school of nursing. The schools are always ready to send literature describing just what is offered and what is expected of the student. Interviews can be arranged without difficulty.

Belk's To Award $500 Scholarships

Scholarships, valued at $500, will again be awarded by Belk's Department Stores to students approved by a committee.

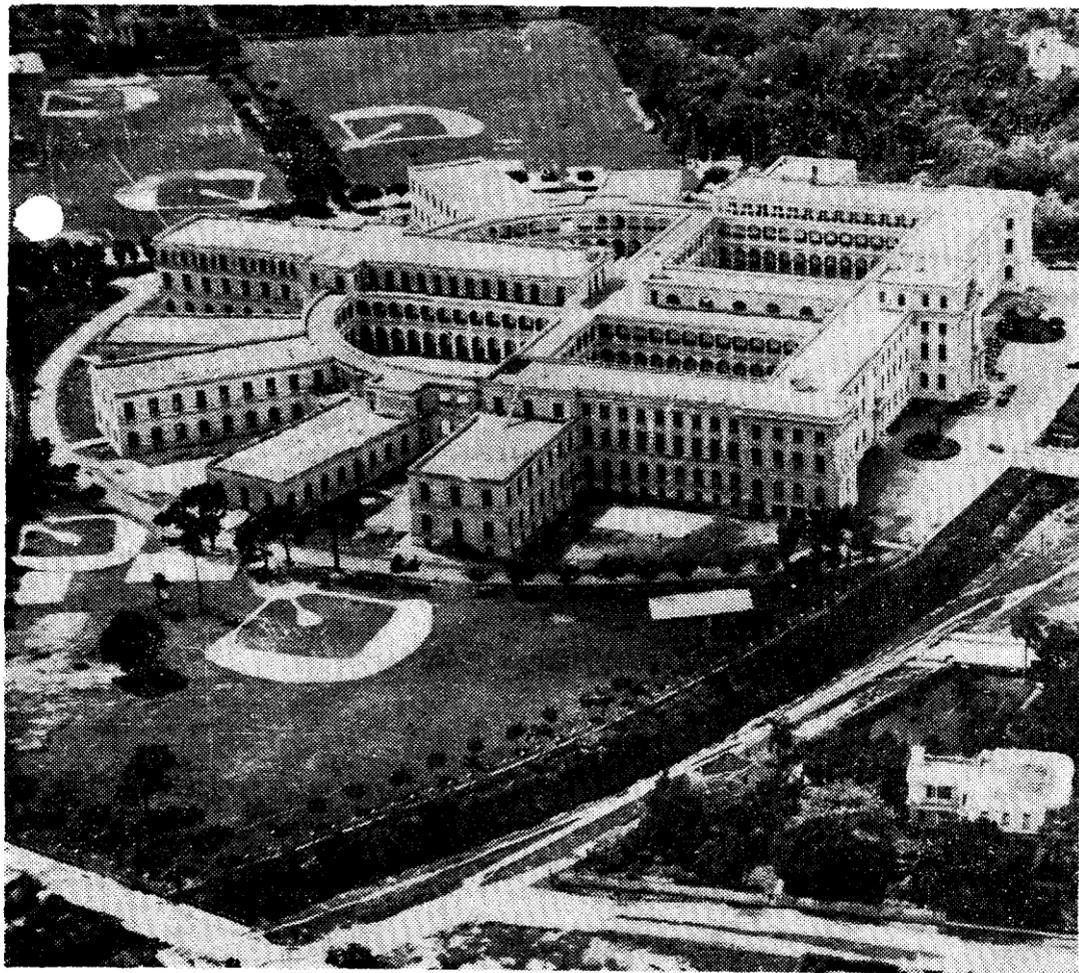

It was not known this week exactly how many scholarships will be awarded but an official said it will probably be at least as many as were given last year and 18 were awarded then.

The scholarships will be awarded by a special committee which will study the applicant's scholastic record, participation in school and community activities, overall merit, character and interests. The winners will be free to select their own colleges and courses of study.

Applications are not available now but will be by the end of February, the official said. They will be available from J. B. Allen, manager of the Belk's store at Red and Bird Roads or from P. R. Edson, manager of the Belk's store at 79th St. and Biscayne Blvd.

A TRIBUTE TO BELEN ♦ ♦ ♦

"What God has given, God has taken away. Blessed be the name of God forever."

This is neither an advertisement nor an appeal for students. It is rather a tribute by Cuban Jesuits and a reminder to their now suffering and exiled alumni and parents of former Belen children, of their beloved old Colegio de Belen. May God grant that it may one day reopen its doors on Cuban soil, to continue its work in the religious and secular formation of Cuban boys and children. (Belen was both a grammar and high school.)

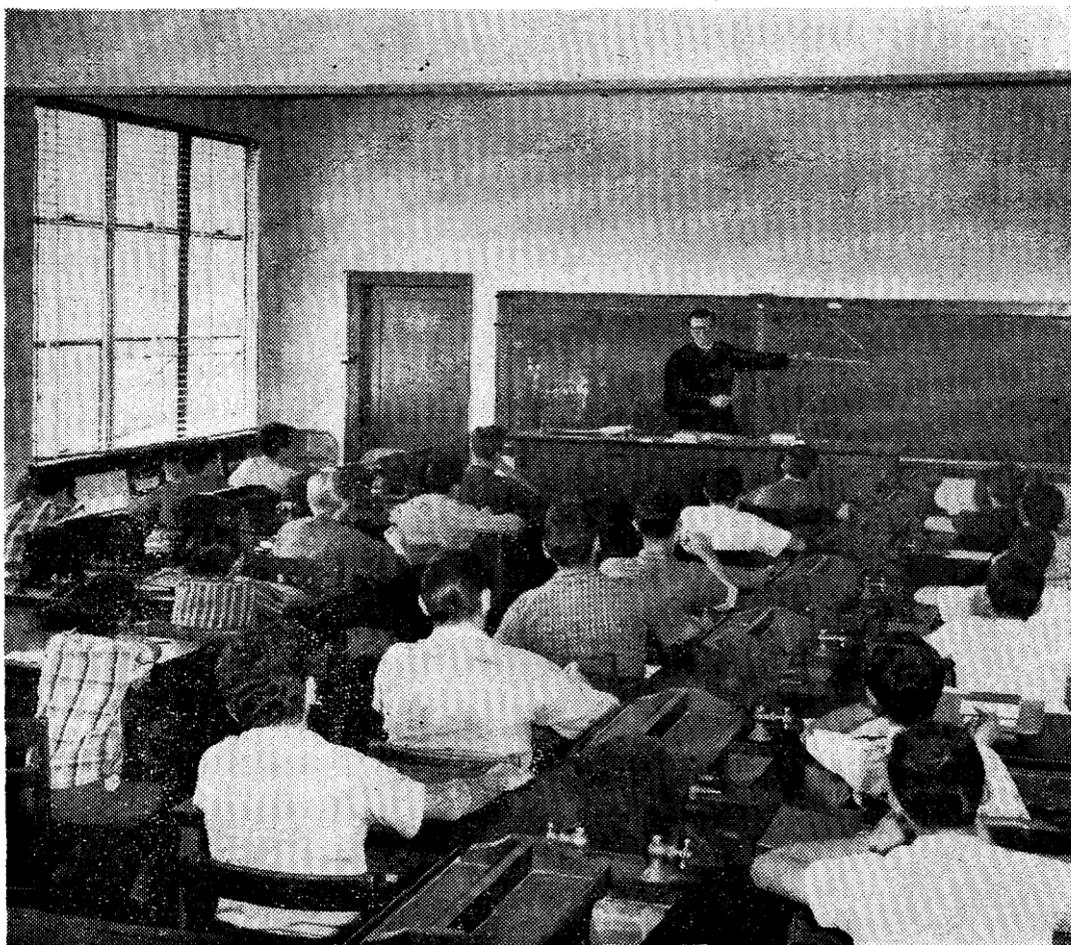

Well known to all its friends is the story of the last months and final confiscation of the school. For 108 years it had rendered a devoted and self-sacrificing service in the education of Cuban youth. Trusting in this and in its non-political character, the school had opened in September for the fall term of 1960 with an enrollment of 1,200 students. However, by the beginning of the Spring Term, in February, more than half of these students had already been withdrawn by their parents, fearful of communist indoctrination and sent out of the country. The first blow against the school came on the third of May, when the school was nationalized and its teaching turned over to Castro and communist-sympathizing professors. Final confiscation and the expulsion of the Jesuits took place ten days later, May 13, 1961.

BELEN IN EXILE

The spirit of Belen continues to live, due solely to the kindness of His Excellency, Bishop Coleman Carroll. If this is a tribute to the former school of Belen it cannot be less of an expression of gratitude to Bishop Carroll for permitting the Jesuits of Belen to continue their work of teaching among many of their former students, who are now living in Miami. After Belen was taken over, the Cuban Jesuits sought permission to reopen the school in Miami. This permission His Excellency most graciously granted, allowing them the use of the fourth-floor class rooms in the Centro Hispano Catolico. For financial support the Cuban Jesuits sought and obtained some aid from the American Jesuit provinces — at least sufficient aid for the initial heavy expenses of opening a new school and residence.

With this permission and with this, at least incipient financial aid, the new Belen, now renamed Jesuit Preparatory School of Miami, opened in September of 1961, with an enrollment of 104 students, ranging from the grades of seven to twelve. Because of the distressing financial situation of their families, 105 of the students, or over half, were admitted as free students, while 35 are required to pay only partial tuition.

In order to fulfill the necessary requirement of English teaching and to adapt the school to American standards, the only Jesuits assigned to teach in the New Belen were, with few exceptions, those who had studied and obtained degrees in American or Canadian Colleges, Universities or Theological Seminaries. Three American Jesuits, moreover, were sent by the New York and New Orleans provinces to help out during the current school year.

What the future holds for them, the Cuban Jesuits cannot know, but they proceed with unfailing trust in the divine promise that to those who love God all things work together unto good.

Fashion Show Slated By St. Thomas Guild

Members of St. Thomas the Apostle Guild will model fashions during the annual luncheon and fashion show under the auspices of the organization at noon, Saturday, Feb. 10 at the Flame Restaurant.

Participating under the direction of Mrs. Justin White will be Mrs. Robert Bishop, Mrs. Edwin Blake, Mrs. Leonard Boymer, Mrs. Frank McGann, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. Leonard O'Brien, Mrs. Charles O'Toole and Mrs. Thomas Watts.

Latest wearing apparel shown will be from Dorene's, the Combo and Wagon Wheel shops.

Mrs. Joseph Zaverznik is general chairman of arrangements assisted by Mrs. Thomas Dowling, Mrs. Boymer, and Mrs. Charles Brandt.

2 State Mental Hospitals Need Volunteer Workers

Members of the Miami Diocesan Council of Catholic Women have been alerted to the need for their interest and service in the two mental hospitals located within the Diocese of Miami.

In her monthly message to affiliation presidents and other board members, Mrs. Julian J. Eberle of Little Flower parish, Coral Gables, outlined the needs of the state-owned institutions, the South Florida State Hospital in Hollywood and the G. Pierce Wood Memorial Hospital in Arcadia.

"Items like thread, bias tape, old zippers and yarn are needed at the South Florida Hospital for physical therapy programs," Mrs. Eberle said, as well as cosmetics, lamps, pictures, throw pillows, and wearing apparel for both men and women. She urged that a DCCW affiliation in the area adopt the mental hospital as a project and offer their services to Msgr. James F. Nelan, pastor, St. Stephen parish, West Hollywood, who celebrates Mass at the hospital every Sunday.

For the past four years members of St. Paul Altar Society in Arcadia have been assisting as volunteers at the G. Pierce Wood Memorial Hospital, which is divided into two sections situated seven and 12 miles outside of Arcadia in DeSoto County.

Here they inaugurated recitation of the rosary among the patients and erected a small shrine to the Blessed Virgin in the recreation hall at Carlstrom Field on Highway 31 where incoming patients are received and treated. In the months that followed patients requested rosary beads which members of the society procured for them and within a few months one of the patients was provided with a book of meditations from which he read and lead the recitation.

At present, Mass is celebrated at the hospital once each week by Father Esteban Soy, administrator of St. Paul parish, and patients pray the rosary in groups each Wednesday. Affiliation members of the Southwest Coast Deanery provide rosaries as needed.

'My Husband Acts Like A Child'

How can a wife get her husband to act like a man instead of a four-year-old? We've been married for almost a year — he was 38 and I was 27 at the time, so we're not children. He comes into the house with dirty shoes on, won't wear pajamas to bed, drops his clothes on the floor instead of hanging them up, and likes to wear dirty, wrinkled shirts. We're expecting our first child soon, but he doesn't seem interested and feels we shouldn't get anything ready until after the baby arrives. Also, he doesn't like the foods that are supposed to be good for him. What kind of an example will he be for our children? P.S. He wasn't anything like this before we got married!

By FATHER JOHN L. THOMAS, S.J.

I think most experienced married women — and mothers — will recognize a familiar note in your letter. Having dealt with the masculine half of the species, man and boy, for years they are well aware that husbands and sons tend to have wills of their own.

Young Wives, in particular, are often distressed by this discovery. The young man who seemed to be so flexible and accommodating during courtship quickly reverts to the independent, exasperatingly careless male his mother probably struggled over for years, once he is married.

Hence your problem, Dorothy, is not unique though it may appear in many different forms and degrees. Differences in training and family backgrounds constitute an obvious source of such disagreements.

Most adults are slow to modify the attitudes, likes or dislikes, and ways of doing things acquired in youth. This is especially true in matters related to the intimacies of family life, for we are raised in relatively closed family circles and consequently have little comparative knowledge of other patterns, so what we grow up believing that our ways are both natural and normal.

We Cling To Familiar Habits

Moreover, most of us are creatures of habit. We cling to the familiar and the accustomed even though we know that other ways may be better or more efficient. This is not a distinctively masculine trait, as husbands who have been trained as efficiency experts in industry or business soon learn when they try to get their wives to adopt some of their methods around the home. In this connection I always think of the response of the old Ozark farmer to the young agricultural expert. "Save your breath, son, I already know how to farm a darn sight better'n I'm doing!"

There is an additional factor involved in getting people to adopt the new, for such change assumes not only that the new is better but that the old is somehow inferior or defective. This latter assumption may arouse considerable resentment, above all in matters related to personal habits or family customs, since we don't like the implied condemnation of what we are or of the way that we were raised.

Granting your inalienable right to try to change your husband, Dorothy, how should you go about it? First, examine your attitude toward the things you dislike in him. Remember that there are many different ways of doing things and you must avoid the common mistake of confusing what is different or what you dislike with what is morally wrong or evil. Many mere differences in taste or custom become such serious sources of marital conflict because they are treated as moral issues.

Men Dislike Orders From Women

Second, something every woman knows or eventually learns if she wishes to be successful in marriage or at work is that men dislike taking orders from women. Wives may find this attitude quite unreasonable around the home where they are supposed to be in charge, yet they cannot ignore it without paying a price, for their husbands will show their resentment either by stubbornly refusing to comply even with the most reasonable request or will find some other way of causing frustration. One common means is to force their wives to call them a half-dozen times for dinner. This seemingly innocent maneuver seldom fails.

Third, following a pattern they learned as boys, many husbands take for granted that they are supposed to protest at their wives demands regarding neatness, cleanliness, and so on. This masculine protest is not wholly sincere — boys and men expect to be "mothered" in this respect though they feel they must assert their independence by not giving in too easily.

If I understand your problem correctly, Dorothy, you are just going through the necessary though painful process of adjusting your ideal conceptions to reality. As a rule, adults change very little and very slowly.

Yet a clever wife can work wonders if she tries to understand her man. Don't be too disturbed by your husband's apparent lack of concern for paternity. Make the necessary preparations quietly, the coming of your first baby will do the rest.

St. Theresa CYO Wins Stamp Drive

The CYO of St. Theresa's, Coral Gables, collected 25 pounds of stamps for the missions placing them first among the CYO groups throughout the Diocese who took part in a drive that began in December.

Mike Brick, president and Father Patrick Farrell, moderator of the St. Theresa group, accepted a trophy for their efforts from Father Walter J. Dockerill, diocesan youth director.

Also on hand for the presentation was Ed Gladd, president of the St. Clement CYO which placed second with 10 pounds.

The cancelled stamps will be sent to mission societies and sold to commercial distributors. Most of the stamps have already been mailed to destinations throughout the world.

Coral Gables Squires To Show 'Wonderland'

Walt Disney's production of "Alice in Wonderland" will be shown by Our Lady of Good Counsel Circle, Coral Gables, of the Columbian Squires in the Epiphany Parish cafeteria Saturday, Feb. 10 at 8 p.m.

Further information can be obtained by calling Francis Flynn at MO 6-3488.

Volleyball Tourney Taken By St. Mary's

St. Mary's eighth-grade girls' volleyball team kept an undefeated record for the season and won a tournament against seven other Dade County parochial teams at Our Lady of Perpetual Help School.

Immaculate Conception girls took second place and the sponsoring Our Lady of Perpetual Help group placed third.

Father John R. Waterman presented a trophy to the winning St. Mary's club.

Our Lady of Perpetual Help officials said they hope the tournament will become an annual affair. They will also sponsor a softball league set to get under way in March.

YOUTH Is Asking...?
Needs Parents'
Consent To Wed

Dear Doris:
A year ago I had an argument with my parents which resulted in their telling me to leave home and not return.

Now I want to marry to a girl I have known for three years. She is 18 and I am 19. I have a very good job and a nice apartment. It is not legal to get married in our state without your parents permission until you are 21. My girl can get her parents consent but I know I can't get mine. We are both Catholic and want to get married in the church. Is there any way I can get married in the Catholic Church without my parents' consent?
Jerry

Go to see your pastor as soon as possible. He will advise you on all the different angles of your problem including a possible solution to the rift between you and your parents. If for any reason you feel you cannot talk to your pastor discuss it with your girl's pastor or any priest you know.

Dear Doris:
I'm 15 and a sophomore in a Catholic high school. I'm in love with a serviceman 19 whom I met this summer while he was on a one week furlough. He says he loves me too but wants me to go out with other boys while he is away.

My mother objects to our seeing one another and does not even want us to correspond because he did not graduate from high school and has no special trade or occupation. His parents are divorced and his mother has remarried. He has not been to the sacraments in a long time. But I think I can get him to go to church.

The other day I received a letter from him through a relative. Should I go against my mother's wishes and continue my correspondence and friendship with this boy? I just can't give him up.
E.

In your letter you stated many reasons why your mother disapproves of this young man. I will add two more — time and your age. A week is barely enough time to get to know one another much less fall in love. And this "getting to know you" is a necessary preamble to real and lasting love. At 15, it is my guess, you are confusing infatuation with love. This happens often when an older boy pays attention to a young girl. You are flattered and confused. But don't feel bad. Recognize it as infatuation and profit by the experience.

Don't miss it!

Time To Guess 'Oscar' Winners Again

By WILLIAM H. MOORING
Some Catholic students in New York challenge me to name the final Oscar winners before the Academy nominations come out on Feb. 26th.

Several movie clubs ply me with lists of their own. There is much more interest in these Oscars than last year's results led me to expect.

At this stage I risk the following "predictions."

Best film: "West Side Story."
Best actor: Paul Newman (with Maximilian Schell) ("Judgment at Nuremberg") his major threat. Best actress: Natalie Wood ("West Side Story") or possibly "Splendor in the Grass" with Audrey Hepburn ("Breakfast at Tiffany's") or "The Children's Hour") as her biggest threat.

Best direction: Robert Wise and Jerome Robbins ("West Side Story") who should beat Robert Rossen ("The Hustler") by a nose, or is it two noses?

SUPPORTING ACTORS REBEL

Supporting actors are raising a big howl this year. Warren Beatty, co-star with Natalie Wood in "Splendor in the Grass" and with Vivien Leigh in "The Roman Spring of Mrs. Stone," is "downgraded" to compete in the supporting actor class. So are Montgomery Clift and Judy Garland, both in the star cast of "Nuremberg." Charles Boyer refused to "down-grade" his performance in "Fanny." Good for him. This sneaky practice is grossly unfair to many good actors and actresses who were hired as "supporting players" in the first place and did well enough to deserve honors. George Chakiris of "West Side Story" for one.

Before next year the Academy will be pressed to outlaw this saddle-switching in the stretch.

2,300 Academy members received nominations ballots on Feb. 1st. From late February to early April, about the same number will vote in the finals.

The 34th annual presentation of Oscars will take place at

More On Matrimony

WCKT, Ch. 7, 11 a.m. The psychological aspects of marriages will be discussed on "That I May See," in the third of a series on the Sacrament of Matrimony conducted by Father David J. Heffernan, pastor, St. Lawrence Parish, North Miami Beach.

Father Butler

TV Mass

WLBW-TV, Ch. 10, 11:30 a.m. Father Donald Butler, S.S.J., pastor of Christ The King parish, Richmond Heights, will offer the Sunday Mass For Shut-Ins. Father Louis M. O'Leary, Barry College chaplain, will be commentator.

Catholic News On Air

WGBS, 710 Kc; 96.3 FM, 6:05 p.m. Msgr. John J. Fitzpatrick, executive editor The Voice and pastor, Little Flower Parish, Hollywood, will broadcast news of the Diocese of Miami and world-wide Catholic news from the NCWC news service.

Programs produced and presented by The Radio And Television Commission of The Diocese of Miami, Father David J. Heffernan, Chairman.

Santa Monica Auditorium, Monday, April 9th. Once again it will be on TV.

Two weeks ago Hollywood attorney, Stanley Fleishman, during a panel discussion on Movie Censorship, said that under the First Amendment no one has a right to tell a film producer what he may or may not put on the screen. Nor the right, in any circumstances, to prevent anyone else from seeing a film he may wish to see.

Fleishman added that what is moral or immoral, obscene or otherwise, is a matter of individual opinion.

Last week, in Modesto, California, attorney Fleishman defended three clients charged with showing an obscene film to minors. He submitted that the film is not obscene. Then he invoked legal technicalities in an attempt to prevent the jury from seeing it in order to form an opinion and render a verdict.

Professional privileges granted, this is double-talk, whichever way you slice it.

"SPLENDOR" OR "SQUALOR?"

When the Legion of Decency objected that "Splendor in the Grass" "presents a confused pattern of moral behavior to young adults," Warners staged special previews. They distributed a questionnaire, results of which they claimed were heavily in support of the film as a good moral lesson to American youth. Now they advertise that no-one under 16 will be admitted unless accompanied by an adult. And the catch-line reads: "One night Deenie (she's a teeny!) decided how she must hold Bud . . . She would be like the other girls . . . and try not to be ashamed."

There is no doubt what this is intended to convey. It is meretricious and insulting.

If this is an example of what the Hollywood producers plan to do in advertising films of "mature" appeal, may Heaven enlighten the immature minds responsible. Voluntary classification of movies, by no means a guarantee that youngsters will be excluded from films they ought not to see, becomes a shoddy exploitation device when advertising of this low caliber is resorted to.

Cardinals Will Get White Vestments

VATICAN CITY (NC) — The second set of matching vestments to be worn by cardinals during papal ceremonies have been delivered to the pontifical sacristy.

The first set, red in color, were first worn by the cardinals living in Rome on Palm Sunday last year. Now the second set, white, are ready for use on Holy Thursday of this year or at any other pontifical ceremony in which the cardinals will be vested in 'e.

The uniform vestments were ordered by Pope John XXIII and paid for by him. The Pope undertook the project because he noticed that each of the Roman Cardinals wore his own vestments which were often quite different in color, material and design.

Objections By Two Groups Killed Census Religion Quiz

WASHINGTON (NC) — Objections raised by the American Jewish Congress and the American Civil Liberties Union killed a proposal to ask about religious affiliation in the 1960 Census of Population, a study claims.

Because of the controversy the objections caused, the Department of Commerce, which controls the Census Bureau, suppressed in 1958 a lengthy report correlating income, occupation and other data with religious affiliation, the same study says.

The suppressed information was gathered by the bureau in the March, 1957, monthly national population sample of 35,000 households. The question was asked at that time to test reaction to it.

The data, after being readied for publication, was suppressed by former Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks. "Strong opposition" which prompted negative reaction in Congress and a belief that it is not government's role to document religious differences were given as reasons.

These statements are made in a copyrighted document entitled, "A Question of Religion," published by the Inter-University Case Program which has about 60 educational institutions as members and is devoted to preparing studies as aids to the teaching and practice of public administration and policy formation.

The possibility of a question on affiliation emerged in April, 1956, when the Census Bureau announced that it was under consideration. A year and a half later, the bureau backed down.

The question was backed by Catholic groups, notably the National Catholic Welfare Conference. It also had support from other groups, including the National Council of Churches, the Methodist House of Bishops and the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., the report says.

Church officials, continues the report, felt such statistics would be useful in planning new facilities. Other groups, such as the Population Association of America, rated information on religion as an important variable in the analysis of American society.

Mass For Missioners

PITTSBURGH (NC) — A Requiem Mass for the Holy Ghost missioners slain in the Congo is being offered Feb. 10 in St. Paul's cathedral. Bishop John J. Wright is presiding and preaching at the Mass.

"PROVIDENCE HAS GIVEN US HOPE AND SLEEP AS A COMPENSATION FOR THE MANY CARES OF LIFE . . ."

Voltaire

That most of us have an abundance of cares, no one will argue. In some instances we can hope for the best, all the while laying a thoughtful foundation of preparation to help things along.

Also, as the saying states, sleep sometimes works wonders in that cares often seem much less awesome in the light of a new day.

Whatever the problem at hand, the decision to "sleep on it" might be wise in that a new perspective and a wholly-changed attitude is the gift of the fresh new day.

A care as great as the loss of a loved one, however, goes far beyond the average misfortune. At such time the bereaved will find comfort and understanding in a comprehensive service such as is available at G. D. PEDEN FUNERAL HOME, Catholic Funeral Home, 8231 Bird Road, where services are complete in every respect. Ambulance service. Phone CA 6-1811.

Bishop Sheen Offers Requiem For Musician

NEW YORK (NC) — Solemn Requiem Mass for violinist and composer Fritz Kreisler, 86, was offered here by Auxiliary Bishop Fulton J. Sheen of New York.

Bishop Sheen gave instructions to Kreisler and his wife before they were received into the Catholic Church in 1947.

Sick To Participate In Parish Program

CARBONDALE, Pa. (NC) — St. Rose Parish is conducting a lay leadership program that includes participation of the sick. The program is tied in with an inquiry class open to the public.

Over 90 homes which priests visit monthly on sick calls will be visited by the CCD board members to enlist the prayers of the sick for the success of the inquiry class.
